was complete and discriminating, while his success as a Commanding Officer went far to prove the capacity of medical officers for Command, and that at a very critical stage in the evolution of a service, always powerful but poorly endowed with official authority.

He retired in 1892, but during the South African War he was recalled to active work, serving as Assistant Director, Army Medical Service, at the War Office until 1901.

On his reversion to the retired list, his long and pre-eminent services were rewarded with the Companionship of the Bath and promotion to the rank of Colonel.

Colonel Johnston took part in the Zulu and Sekukuni Campaigns and in that against the Boers in 1881. At the storming of Sekukuni's stronghold on 28 November, 1879, he did duty at the dressing station of an improvised Bearer Company, the first employed with British troops, and, in the campaign against the Transvaal Boers in 1881 he commanded the first fully trained and equipped Bearer Company to leave these shores. He was thus intimately connected with the origin of the Field Ambulance which, to-day, fills such an important part in the Medical operations of war, and his association with this epoch in the evolution of the Army Medical Service is noteworthy.

Up to that time even thoughtful soldiers had regarded the care of the sick and wounded merely as a humanitarian consideration, but gradually it has come to be recognised that the maintenance of an Army in health and strength, and early recovery of those stricken in battle, are factors of prime importance in the waging of successful war.

Such considerations were ever in the mind of William Johnston, and, when he determined to devote some of his leisure to the compilation of this Roll, it was not intended as a mere record of the names and status of the men therein enumerated, but as a study in evolution, and had he lived to complete the historical introduction, I think the long record of biographic detail would have been subordinated to the elucidation of the story and the lesson that the Roll reveals.

Early in his service his attention was directed to problems of organisation, foreseeing that the coherence and esprit de corps of a united service were essential preliminaries to the solution of the administrative difficulties that attended the maintenance of the health of troops in the field and the relief of the sick and wounded in war. The first step was taken in 1873, when through the genius and determination of Sir William Muir the department was unified and the regimental medical system abolished.

The years that intervened between 1873 and 1898 were years of difficulty and struggle, for it was not until men untrammelled with the regimental tradition had become numerous and influential that the change became generally acceptable even within the Army Medical Department. It was to Colonel Johnston as much as any man that the medical service became a corps in the Army. In 1890 he submitted to the College of Physicians a remarkable memorandum that did much to demonstrate the necessity of this to the profession and to the higher command of the Army, and it is well that his share in bringing this about should be emphasised.

Of his activities in other directions after his retirement it is easier to speak, but it will suffice to say that he published for private distribution various monographs, of which that on The Bibliography and Extant Portraits of Arthur Johnston, the famous Latinist who was Physician to James VI. and Charles I., and a member of his family, may be mentioned here.

The work that he did for the University of Aberdeen has been placed on record in its minutes. From 1911 he was Assessor for the General Council in the University Court. His Roll of Graduates, undertaken at the special request of the General Council, is a monument of painstaking research, and was the forerunner of the more difficult task to which this note is prefaced. I do not think it is possible without an intimate knowledge of the labour involved, of the toil of a systematic overhaul of the Gazettes, of the grubbing in unindexed records in the Rolls Office, and in contemporary papers scattered in many directions, to realise the complexities to be unravelled, but nothing ever induced Johnston to infer that which could be verified by diligent investigation. His was the true spirit of historical research, and the last weeks of his life were spent at the Rolls Office and British Museum verifying his references.

I have said nothing of the man, and it is difficult to speak restrainedly of his enthusiasm, of his breadth of view, of his sense of proportion, and his passionate regard for accuracy. His hospitality, his love of his home at Newton Dee, of its woods, and its walks, his friendships, his appreciation and understanding of the younger generation of officers, and above all his devotion to the Corps he served so long and well, are abiding memories to men in every theatre of war where British troops are now engaged.

More than most he appreciated the task before the Royal Army Medical Corps in a great war.

I think it was his perfect understanding of what symbols like military rank stood for, combined with breadth of outlook, that especially distinguished him. No thought of a departmental triumph ever dimmed his perception of the wider issues involved ; he grasped the fundamental considerations and cared not at all for the little matters that bulk largely in controversy, except in their bearing on his main objective.

Above all he was a soldier, his knowledge of the Army was wide, and almost meticulous in its accuracy, his reading in military history was extensive, and he was the repository of much traditional lore and anecdote.

During his life, and since his death, this work has had the encouragement and assistance of his wife. Mrs. Johnston could better than most describe the labour he gave to the Roll, and, as an old friend privileged to write this note, it is a great pleasure to place on record her connection with that which she has regarded as a trust.

His untimely death left much to be accomplished ; and the task has been taken up by Lieutenant Colonel H. A. L. Howell, whose knowledge of the early history of the Medical Service is well known to his brother officers.

Much material concerning the lives and sufferings of Medical Officers during the Peninsular period has been left untouched, and it is to be hoped that when leisure and opportunity come to us again some worthy successor will be able to explore the long list of Records of Service in which are described the personal experiences and adventures of the Medical Officers of that time.

EDITOR'S PREFACE.

THIS book is a ROLL of the Commissioned Officers of the Army Medical Service from the accession of George II to the formation of the Royal Army Medical Corps in 1898. It is true that Army Medical Officers existed in the Standing Army from the date of its foundation in 1660, and even before that date when armies took the field. The late Mr. Charles Dalton had, however, already published lists of Commission Registers from the formation of the Standing Army to the end of the reign of George I, and these admirable lists include the names and dates of Commissions of Army Medical Officers. Colonel W. Johnston therefore decided to start this ROLL from the beginning of the reign of George II.

The part of the ROLL which deals with the reign of George I is almost entirely the result of researches carried out at the Public Record Office and British Museum for Colonel Johnston by Colonel A. Peterkin, C.B., M.B., A.M.S., Ret., and, as it may be taken as an axiom that the earlier the date of the Commission the more difficult it has been to trace, a full acknowledgment of Colonel Peterkin's labours is due to him.

This ROLL, a labour of love for ten long years or more, Colonel Johnston did not live to see through the press. The material for the book had been collected and part of the Introduction was finished, ready for the printer. A certain amount of research was, however, still necessary to complete some of the entries. This research work has been carried out at the British Museum and the Public Record Office by Miss Lilian Carpenter, who had assisted Colonel Johnston before his death, and was therefore thoroughly acquainted with his wishes and his methods.

Miss Carpenter has been of very great assistance to the Editor in putting the book together and in correcting proofs. This lady has also compiled the Index.

At an earlier period, for several years in fact, Colonel Johnston was greatly helped in the collection of material for his book by another lady, Miss Ruth Nicolson. Her work under Colonel Johnston's direction must also be acknowledged here.

The Editor feels that he must also express his thanks to Mr. P. J. Anderson, LL.B., Librarian to the University of Aberdeen. This gentleman, residing in Aberdeen, has been of great help to both Editor and Printer in seeing the book through the press. He has supplied the Bibliography printed on pp. xii.-xvi.

The sudden death of Colonel Johnston placed his widow in an unfortunate predicament. In order to bring out the book it was necessary to find an Editor who was acquainted with the subject. Mrs. Johnston therefore appealed to Sir Alfred Keogh, G.C.B., Director-General, Army Medical Service, for his advice and assistance, and Lieut.-Colonel H. A. L. Howell, R.A.M.C., who has written a good deal on military medical history, was asked to check the work and prepare it for publication. That officer explained that he was already engaged in writing a similar book, but, on finding that the two books did not cover the same ground (the one dealing with Officers only, the other more with the Medical History of campaigns), he undertook the task.

The Editor's endeavour has been to arrange the material according to the instructions left by Colonel Johnston, and he has had, furthermore, the benefit of the advice of Mrs. Johnston, and of several of Colonel Johnston's friends when any difficulty arose. His thanks are due to Mr. George Johnston, Sir Alfred Keogh, Sir William Babtie, V.C., Colonel Peterkin, and Mr. P. J. Anderson, for this help.

The Editor has been able to expand some of the more important biographies, has added a good many war services of Medical Officers, has brought up to date, as far as possible, the biographies of those mentioned in the ROLL who are still living, and has completed the Introductory matter. He fears that some of the later information is not so complete as it might be, but this has been due to inability to procure more. The Great War has closed many sources of information: it has not even been possible to compile a complete list of those now on Active Service.

Many difficulties have attended the publication of this ROLL, labour troubles and the scarcity of paper for the printer, absence on active service for the Editor. Luckily, most of the work was done before the Editor went to France, but most of the proofs have had to be corrected overseas and part of the Introduction re-written during a short leave in England.

The Editor is glad to have his name associated with the publication of this book, the work of a brother officer and a worker in the same field of historical research. He ventures to think that it will prove to be the best and most lasting memorial to the memory of that gallant and distinguished officer and gentleman.

INTRODUCTION.

THE history of the British Standing Army begins in the reign of Charles II. When Charles II was restored to the throne in 1660 he received the whole of the Parliamentary Army into his service. England did not, however, require such a large Standing Army, nor could the finances of the country continue to bear the strain of its support. The Army was therefore disbanded, and, on the same day, some of the regiments were re-embodied to form the foundation of the Regular Army, which, from that day to this, has gallantly sustained the honour of our land in all quarters of the globe.

The newly-formed Army consisted of the Earl of Oxford's cavalry regiment, which became the Royal Horse Guards, and Monk's regiment of foot, now the Coldstream Guards; and to these were added the Life Guards and the Foot Guards which had been with Charles in France. The Scots Guards were also raised the same year in Scotland, and, in 1661, the Royal Scots was transferred from the French service to our own. In 1661 the Standing Army amounted to 5000 men, divided into two cavalry regiments and six regiments of foot.

Such was the small beginning of the British Army: an army which, cut down in time of peace and expanded in time of war, numbers now, in the day of our struggle with Germany and her Allies, a force of five millions of men.

In the beginning each regiment of foot and horse had its surgeon, and the Life Guards had a surgeon to each troop. "Chirurgeons' Mates" were first added to the establishment in 1673, and by 1684 every regiment of foot had a mate as well as a surgeon.[1] Regimental detachments were provided with surgeons' mates. Mates were appointed by warrant; surgeons were commissioned officers.

When an Army took the field the need of medical officers in addition to those on the regimental establishments became evident. A physician was therefore appointed to the staff of the general officer commanding, and he was assisted by an apothecary. Garrisons also required a separate medical establishment, and we find physicians, surgeons, and mates appointed to them. The chief garrisons, already in being when Charles II came to the throne and retained by him with their medical officers, were Berwick, Hull, Portsmouth, Plymouth, and the Tower of London, while overseas we held Dunkirk.

[1] Clifford Walton's History of the British Standing Army, 1660-1700.

The need of medical officers of higher rank to direct army medical concerns led, as in former times, to the appointments of Surgeon-General, Physician-General, and Apothecary-General. So arose a Medical Staff in addition to the regimental medical officers. This Medical Staff was very small in peace but was expanded in time of war. Very early in the reign of Charles II we find evidence that his Sergeant-Surgeon, John Knight, was directing the medical affairs of the Army. He became "Surgeon-General of all the forces in England and Wales" on 16 Dec. 1664.[1] Before this, on 4 March 1662, Alexander Eristy had been appointed "Surgeon-General of Hospitals" at Dunkirk.[2] The first "Physician-General to the Army" appears to have been Dr. Thos. Lawrence, with date 24 June 1685.[3] In Ireland, however, James Fountaine was appointed "Chirurgeon-General" on 5 April 1661, and William Currer, M.D., became "Physician-General in Ireland" on 3 July 1660, although his patent was not issued until 26 June 1663.[4] A Dutchman, Arnold Boate, is said to have been Physician-General in Ireland at an earlier date, but his patent is not in the Patent Rolls.[5]

The first appointment of a Physician-General to the Army in Scotland appears to be that of Dr. David Mitchell in 1696.[6]

The first Apothecary in the new Standing Army was Richard Whittle, who was appointed on 24 Jan. 1673. In the same year he became "Apothecary-General to the forces employed in the present expedition," and on 1 Jan. 1686, Apothecary-General.[7]

The first Physician appointed by Charles II appears to have been Dr. Henry Wyatt, "Physician to the Garrison of Dunkirk and Forces in Flanders," date 14 Nov. 1661.[8] On 7 March 1663, Dr. Tim Clerke, Physician in Ordinary to the King, was appointed "Physician to the new raised forces within the Kingdom".[9]

The earliest commissions of Garrison Surgeons in the new Army were Jno. Price, "Chirurgeon to our Forces in Scilly," 3 July 1666;[10] Mat. Fachell, "Chirurgeon to the Garrison at Portsmouth," 31 Oct. 1673; and Robert Spotswood, "Chirurgeon to Tangier Garrison," 1 March 1677.[11]

An interesting early commission is that of Ferdo. Watkins, "Chirurgeon to Our Hospital to attend Our Army," 9 Oct. 1688. This commission was supplemented by Warrants for four Surgeons' Mates, dated 10 Oct., signed by Surgeon-General Pierce.[12]

It early became evident on active service that hospitals other than regimental hospitals were necessary. So arose General Hospitals, and as these existed only in war-time we find on the outbreak of hostilities the appointment of officers "to the hospitals". These officers were Directors, Physicians, Master Surgeons, Surgeons, Master Apothecaries, Apothecaries, Purveyors, Surgeons' Mates and Apothecary's Mates.[1] When peace came these were either placed on half-pay or retired from the service. Many years later General Hospitals were found to be necessary as part of the permanent establishment of the Army, and so a permanent medical staff was maintained to look after them.

The almost continuous wars during the reigns of William and Mary and Queen Anne led to the appearance of other military hospitals. These were the Field Hospitals. Such hospitals had occasionally existed in former armies, as in the army of Henry of Navarre, and during the war for the Conquest of Granada under Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain, but William III appears to have been the first to realise their value as part of the necessary establishment of a British Army in the field. These hospitals were called Marching Hospitals (and, later, Flying Hospitals), to distinguish them from the General or "Fixed" Hospitals at the base or on the lines of communication. These hospitals first accompanied our Army during William III's campaign in Ireland. They followed the Army and, coming up after an action, took over the wounded on the field, afterwards transferring the serious cases to the General or Fixed Hospitals at the base. Such hospitals were evidently the forerunners of the tent divisions of the Field Ambulances and the Casualty Clearing Stations of our own day. These hospitals required a special medical personnel, and it may be noted that they also had nurses, cars for the transport of the sick, drivers, and men-servants. The men-servants were armed. The earliest appointment to these hospitals is that of Francis Smith, M.D., "to be Physician to the Marching Hospital," 28 Dec. 1689.[2] The first appointment of a Purveyor to a hospital was that of William Taylor, "to Our Marching Hospital in Our Kingdom of Ireland," 1 Feb. 1690; and, on the same day, three Purveyors were also appointed "to the Fixed Hospital in Ireland".[3] The earliest mentions of Master Surgeons, Master Apothecaries, and Apothecary's Mates are in connection with the Marching Hospitals in Ireland and Flanders at this time, 1690-1692.[4] Master Surgeons were the senior Surgeons in hospitals, and, later, in garrisons, and received a much higher rate of pay than other surgeons.

The "Fixed" or General Hospitals and "Marching" or Field Hospitals established by William III were under the command of Governors or Directors. The earliest appointment was that of Colonel Venner to the Fixed Hospital in Dublin (at the Royal Hospital, Kilmainham).[5]

He afterwards held a similar appointment, but extending over all the hospitals, during William's campaigns in Flanders. During Marlborough's campaigns a Mr. Hudson held this appointment, and there are several references to him in Marlborough's despatches. These Directors were not medical officers. The first Directors appointed who were medical men were Dr. Alex. Sandilands, Director at Gibraltar, 1 Mar. 1727, and John Ellis, Director of Hospitals in Flanders, 20 Mar. 1742. It may be noted that an immediate improvement in the management of hospitals was recorded when medical officers held this appointment.[1]

The Marching, Flying, or Field Hospitals disappeared from our Army after Marlborough's campaigns[2] and did not reappear until the nineteenth century.

The ranks then of Commissioned Officers of the Army Medical Service prior to the opening of this ROLL, and for a long time after, were Physician-General, Surgeon-General, Apothecary-General, Physician, Master Surgeon, Surgeon, Purveyor, Master Apothecary, and Apothecary. Surgeons' Mates, Apothecary's Mates, and Hospital Mates were of warrant rank only. Mates to regimental Surgeons were appointed by warrants signed by the Colonels of regiments. All Mates to hospitals and garrisons had their warrants signed by the Surgeon-General, and later by the Army Medical Board.[3] These methods of appointment continued until the appearance of the Royal Warrant of 30 Nov. 1796. Surgeons to regiments appear originally to have been appointed by the Colonels of newly raised corps or obtained their commissions by purchase. All commissions were signed by the Secretary of State for War or, if abroad, by the Commander-in-Chief of the Army or Station. It was decided, however, as early as 5 July 1666 that no Surgeons should have their commissions signed until they were approved by the Surgeon-General.[4] In 1691 complaints of "negligence and ignorance" led to the institution of an examination before the Surgeon-General of all candidates for medical appointments.[5] The supply of Physicians to the Army was in the hands of the Physician-General, but was at times entrusted to the President of the London College of Physicians.[6] The supply of Medical Officers often fell short of the demand, especially in war time. Before the foundation of the Standing Army when this occurred the Company of Barber Surgeons was usually asked to supply the Surgeons required, and there were even occasions on which Surgeons for the Army were obtained by impressment.[7] The qualifications of a Surgeons' Mate were very low, in early times they were often apprentices of the Surgeons. Surgeons were usually promoted from the ranks of the Surgeons' Mates.

The pay and position of an Army Medical Officer was not very attractive, so that a custom arose by which a Surgeon or Surgeons' Mate often purchased in addition the commission of an ensign, so adding to his pay and regimental status. This practice continued in the Militia long after it had ceased in the Regular Army. Several instances of such double-commissions will be found in this ROLL.[1] Promotion led to the giving up either of his surgical or his combatant commission.

Coming now to the period of this ROLL, 1727-1898, it will perhaps be better, in order to facilitate reference, to deal with the evolution of rank and status of the Medical Officers of the Army by taking each rank in turn and showing its changes from time to time.

From the earlier part of this introduction it will be noted that the Medical Department of the Army was divided into three parts, namely,

1. Regimental.
2. Staff and Hospitals.
3. Superintending or Controlling.[2]

I. Regimental.—The regimental medical personnel consisted of the Surgeons and their Mates. Surgeons' Mates were, as already stated, warrant officers only; their appointment was vested in the Colonels of regiments and their warrants were signed by them. From the method of appointment not being under medical control it can easily be understood that the medical and surgical qualifications of the Mates were not likely to be of a high order. Some were properly qualified men, but the greater number had little other qualification than that they had been apprentices to a surgeon in general practice, and had attended courses in Anatomy, Surgery, and Medicine in some University, College, or Medical School. At the same time many were highly educated men. Their regimental status, being that of a warrant officer, placed them in a difficult position. The ensign of a regiment, perhaps an ignorant, ill-educated boy, was of higher rank. The mate of a regiment was equally exposed in common with the rank and file of the regiment to the full rigours of regimental discipline, there was even nothing to prevent him being flogged should occasion arise.[3] If he deserted his description was advertised in the public press and rewards offered for his apprehension,[4] and there is an instance on record, in Flanders in 1745, where, having "aspersed the character" of two lieutenants, a Regimental Surgeon's Mate was "cashiered and drummed out of both lines of the British Army, with a Halter round his neck".[5] No changes, however, took place in the status of the Regimental Mate until after the outbreak of war with France in 1793.

At this date an increase of the hospital establishments of the Army became necessary and, the pay of Hospital Mates being higher, many Regimental Mates transferred to the hospitals as Hospital Mates. An increase in the number of Surgeons led to the promotion of many Regimental Mates, and many also purchased commissions. Very soon the greater part of the Infantry and Cavalry was unprovided with Mates, and one of the first acts of the newly-constituted Army Medical Board was to direct attention to the unsatisfactory state of affairs, showing that the deficiency was due to the low status of the mate and the low rate of pay offered.[1] The only improvements which followed were an increase of pay allowed to Surgeons' Mates serving abroad, and to the Medical Board was given the power of refusing approval of the warrants of Surgeons' Mates whose professional knowledge was not equal to the appointment. The Board was also directed to promote Surgeons' Mates to the rank of Surgeon as vacancies occurred.[2] The deficiency of Surgeons' Mates continuing, the Royal Warrant of 30 Nov. 1796 was issued by which the pay and position of Regimental Surgeons and Mates were improved. By this warrant: (1) The allowances for the supply of Medicines and for hospital expenses, hitherto in the hands of the regimental surgeons, were discontinued. The Apothecary-General was directed to supply the medicines, and the other expenses became a public charge. (2) The pay of Regimental Surgeons was increased, and for purpose of allowances and allotment of quarters they were to rank as Captains. On retirement, after twenty years' service, they were granted a pension of 5s. a day. (3) Surgeons' Mates were in future "to be stiled Assistant Surgeons and to be appointed by Commission from his Majesty, or generals authorised by him". Their pay was also increased and, as regards grant of quarters, they were to rank as Subalterns.

Shortly afterwards further regulations were issued defining in more detail the changes in the position of the Regimental Surgeons and Assistant Surgeons.

In the Foot Guards, the three Senior Surgeons were given pay of 15s. a day, and were to take rank according to the dates of their commissions with Captains of companies, that is with Lieutenant-Colonels, taking precedence of all Captains of the line, when Guards acted with other troops. Subordinate to these there were one Battalion Surgeon and three assistants attached to each of the three regiments of Guards. The Battalion Surgeons were to rank as Captains with the Lieutenants according to seniority and take precedence of the Line, whenever the Guards acted with other corps. The Assistant Surgeons ranked with the Ensigns and took similar precedence.

In Cavalry Regiments, the Surgeon was to rank as youngest among the Captains and the Assistant Surgeon as junior Lieutenant.

In the Infantry, the Surgeon was to rank according to the date of his commission with the Captains, and the Assistant Surgeon as a Subaltern in the same manner. With respect to military rank none of the above were entitled to exercise it.[1]

On 1 June 1797 a similar Royal Warrant was issued to apply to the Army in Ireland. This also laid down that the Surgeon, "in no shape whatever shall have any Claim to Military Rank in our Army, different from what the Surgeons of Regiments are now entitled to".

These Warrants took effect, in England from 25 Dec. 1796; in Ireland from 1 May 1797. Assistant Surgeons were first gazetted on 7 Feb. 1797, and their names first appear in the Army List in 1798. By the following year most of the vacancies had been filled up, in some regiments one and in others two Assistant Surgeons having been appointed. Many of the commissions were antedated, thus thirteen Assistant Surgeons gazetted to the Foot Guards on 18 Feb. 1797, had their commissions dated 25 Dec. 1796. Two Assistant Surgeons, Thos. Scott, 14 F., and Coote Ramage, 31 F., were gazetted 22 Aug. 1797, but their commissions were dated as 1 Nov. 1796, and Alex. McCausland, gazetted Assistant Surgeon, 23 F., on 25 Mar. 1797, had his commission dated 24 Dec. 1796.

In Sept. 1803 an additional Assistant Surgeon was appointed to regiments of 500 men or upwards, and on 27 April 1826 it was directed that a third Assistant Surgeon should be posted to each of the Regiments of Cavalry and Infantry in His Majesty's Service in the East Indies "on account of the amount of sickness in the troops there and so many Medical Officers being obliged to return home invalided".

There are few further changes to note in the position of Surgeons and Assistant Surgeons of Regiments. Their pay and half-pay were increased by the Royal Warrants of 22 May 1814, 3 Aug. 1814, 22 July 1830, 22 Nov. 1857, and 1 Oct. 1858. The first of these Warrants gave the Medical Officer the right to claim to retire on half-pay, on the completion of twenty years' service on full-pay. The Royal Warrant of 14 Oct. 1840 altered this to twenty-five years' service.

Staff Surgeons were by the Royal Warrant of 14 Oct. 1840 divided into two classes and Regimental Surgeons were ranked with Staff-Surgeons, 2nd Class, according to the dates of their respective commissions. The next change was introduced by the Royal Warrant of 1 Oct. 1858, in which it was directed that Regimental Surgeons after twenty years full-pay service should be styled Surgeon-Major.

The Army Medical Department and the Ordnance Medical Department were placed under one Director-General in 1853, and soon after this promotions of Medical Officers from the Royal Artillery into the [1] A Treatise on Military Finance, etc., Lond. 1804, sec. viii.

Line, and vice versa, were allowed. The two departments were not, however, completely merged until 1859, when the last two Deputy Inspectors, O.M.D., were absorbed. Before this, on 25 May 1855, both departments had come under the control of the Commander-in-Chief.

The relative ranks of Surgeons-Major, Surgeons and Assistant Surgeons were fixed by Royal Warrant, dated 27 Sept. 1860; the Surgeon-Major ranking as Lieutenant-Colonel, the Surgeon as Major, the Assistant Surgeon of over six years' service as Captain, and the Assistant Surgeon of under six years' service as Lieutenant.

The Regimental System, in which the Medical Officers were an integral part of the regiment and which had existed for so long a period, was found to be incompatible with the development of the Army Medical Service, and, in consequence on 1 March 1873, a Royal Warrant, devised by Mr. Cardwell, then Secretary of State for War, abolished the Regimental System and placed all medical officers in one Staff or Department.

In the same year it was directed that Military Hospitals should be organised and administered either as General, Station, or Field Hospitals: Regimental Hospitals ceased to exist.

The medical organisation of the Household Troops, however, still differed from that of the rest of the Army, and may now be considered.

Appointment and Promotion of Medical Officers of the Household Troops.—Although a system of nominations to commissions and of promotion in the Medical establishment of the Household Troops, apart from the General Service, had existed for some time previously, special regulations on these matters were published for the first time in the Pay Warrant of 27 Dec. 1870, Arts. 339-341. It was therein laid down that on the occasion of a vacancy occurring among the Surgeons [afterwards Surgeons-Major] of the Household Cavalry, the Assistant Surgeon [afterwards Surgeon] who had served longest in the Brigade of Household Cavalry, if recommended by the Colonel of the regiment in which the vacancy had occurred, should fill the vacancy.

A similar rule was to be followed in the Foot Guards, except that it was open to the Colonel of the regiment to recommend the promotion of the Senior Assistant Surgeon of the whole Army, or the transfer of a Surgeon from a Cavalry or Infantry regiment of the line to fill the vacancy, in place of the Senior Assistant Surgeon of the Brigade of Foot Guards.

If a vacancy occurred in the Surgeoncy of a regiment of Foot Guards which did not fall by Brigade seniority to the Senior Assistant Surgeon of the particular regiment, such Assistant Surgeon, provided he was serving in the Brigade on 1 Oct. 1858, might be promoted to the rank of Surgeon and remain on the strength of the regiment in lieu of an Assistant Surgeon until he succeeded to the Surgeoncy of the Battalion by Brigade seniority (see No. 5440, George Perry).

The Warrant further laid down that a Medical Officer of the Household Troops had no claim to promotion to the rank of D.I.G. or I.G. in the General Service.

The Royal Warrant of 18 Nov. 1880, referred to below, amended in some particulars the above regulations. Under its provisions it was laid down that Medical Officers were to be nominated for the Regiments of Household Troops by the Colonels of Regiments from—

(a) Successful candidates for commissions in the A.M.D.

(b) Candidates nominated for the A.M.D. by the Secretary of State for War.

(c) Surgeons already serving in the A.M.D.

A Medical Officer so selected was required to pass through the course prescribed for Surgeons, A.M.D., on probation, his regimental commission to bear the date of his passing from probation.

The seniority in the Brigade of a Surgeon, A.M.D., transferred to a Regiment of Household Troops reckoned for promotion from the day on which he was gazetted to the Regiment.

The promotion of Medical Officers of the Household Troops was to be entirely by seniority in the Medical establishment of the Brigades of Cavalry and Infantry respectively, without reference to length of service. At the same time Medical Officers of the Household Troops were given the option of transfer to the A.M.D. and were permitted to exchange thereto.

The Royal Warrant of 19 Jan. 1889, also referred to below, limited the nomination by the titular Colonels of Regiments to Medical Officers of the rank of Surgeon-Major, as it was intended that no appointments of Junior Medical Officers of these regiments should in future be made. As is further shown below, this arrangement as regards the Household Cavalry was abandoned and the old system reverted to under Royal Warrant of 11 Aug. 1902

In this Warrant there is no proviso that Surgeon-Lieutenants in the Household Cavalry shall be taken from the approved candidates for the R.A.M.C., nor is it laid down that they shall be required to go through the course required of these. The regulation allowing exchange between Officers of the R.A.M.C. and Medical Officers of the Household Cavalry disappeared in the Pay Warrant of 30 Aug. 1907, but a Captain R.A.M.C. is eligible for transfer as Surgeon-Captain of a regiment of Household Cavalry if nominated by the titular Colonel and approved by the Army Council (Pay Warrant, 20 Aug. 1913, Art. 369).

Medical Officers of the Household Troops.—Surgeons and Assistant Surgeons.—As in regiments of the line, the earliest commissioned Medical Officers of the Household Troops were styled Surgeons and Assistant Surgeons.

Assistant Surgeons were first commissioned to the Royal Horse Guards and to the three regiments of Foot Guards in 1796, but were not appointed to the 1st and 2nd Life Guards until 1804.

Surgeon-Major and Battalion Surgeon.—In 1804 the senior Surgeon of each regiment of Foot Guards was given the style of Surgeon-Major, and the other Surgeons of each regiment were styled Battalion Surgeons.

Surgeon-Major under R.W. of 1 Oct. 1858.—Under the Royal Warrant of 1 Oct. 1858, the Surgeons of the Household Troops, on completion of twenty years' full-pay service, were, in common with other Army Medical Officers of the same standing, styled Surgeons-Major, ranking as Lieutenant-Colonels. Hence it followed that in the Foot Guards an officer might be a Surgeon-Major in the Army although he remained a Battalion Surgeon in the regiment to which he belonged.

Alteration of designations under R.W. of 1 March 1873.—Under the Royal Warrant of 1 March 1873, the designation of all Surgeons of the Household Troops, having less than twenty years' full-pay service, was altered, in common with other Army Medical Officers of similar rank, to Surgeon-Major, ranking as Major, and every Assistant Surgeon was given the designation of Surgeon.

Grade of Brigade Surgeon added, and designation of Battalion Surgeon in the Foot Guards abolished.—Under the Royal Warrant of 18 Nov. 1880 (A.C. Cl. 282 of 1880) the ranks of the Medical Officers of the Household Troops became those of Brigade Surgeon, Surgeon-Major, and Surgeon, exactly corresponding with those holding similar positions in the Army Medical Department. The designation of Battalion Surgeon in the Foot Guards consequently ceased, and those officers holding that rank became Surgeons-Major; but this change was not made in the Army List until May 1881. It was also laid down that the Brigade Surgeon of the Brigade of Guards should remain an executive Medical Officer in the regiment to which he belonged, although available for administrative charge.

Compound titles introduced.—Under the Royal Warrant of 7 Aug. 1891, the designations of the ranks of Medical Officers of the Household Troops were altered, in common with other Army Medical Officers of similar position, to Brigade-Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel, Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel, Surgeon-Major, and Surgeon-Captain.

Temporary connection of the Guards Medical Officers with the R.A.M.C. from June 1898 to Jan. 1899.—From 23 June 1898, under the Royal Warrant of that date, the Medical Officers of the Household Troops whilst still remaining in their regiments were borne on the establishment of the Royal Army Medical Corps as seconded officers of that Corps; but under the Royal Warrant of 4 Jan. 1899, this system was abolished, and they reverted to their former position on the establishment of their respective regiments.

Partial impairment of Regimental Medical System in Household Troops.—By Royal Warrant of 19 Jan. 1889 (A.O. 60 of 1889) the abolition of the Regimental Medical System in the Household Troops was foreshadowed, and the Secretary of State's instructions on this Warrant directed that although the Brigade Surgeon and Surgeon-Majors were to remain on the establishment of these regiments, no further appointments of Surgeons (the then junior rank) to the Household Troops were to be made. But this did not interfere with the transfer from one Regiment to another of officers under the rank of S.M. (see Carte, H. Mitchell, H. R. O. Cross and Rayner).

The end of the Regimental Medical System in Foot Guards.—By Royal Warrant dated 12 Feb. 1904 (A.O. 43 of 1904) it was directed that no Medical Officers were in future to be transferred to the regiments of Foot Guards, and the Medical Officers who then held commissions in these regiments were given the option of remaining therein or being transferred to the R.A.M.C. On the retirement on 14 May 1913 of the last remaining Officer, Surg.-Lt.-Col. J. F. Bateson, Coldstream Guards, the Regimental Medical System in the regiments of the Brigade of Foot Guards came to an end, having survived the abolition of that system in the line, artillery, and engineers for forty years.

Resuscitation of full Regimental System in Household Cavalry.—But on the other hand, by Royal Warrant of 11 Aug. 1902 the nomination of Junior Medical Officers (Surgeon-Lieutenants) to the regiments of Household Cavalry by the titular Colonels of these regiments had been re-introduced, and the six Medical Officers of these three regiments now constitute a body apart from the other officers of the Medical Service of the Army and represent what is the last remnant of the Regimental Medical Service in the Regular Army.

II. Staff and Hospitals.—It has already been noted that before the opening of this ROLL there existed, in addition to the Regimental Medical Officers, a distinct separate Medical personnel, or Medical Staff, whose duty was concerned with hospitals other than the small regimental hospitals. With the exception of the hospitals in certain garrisons at home and abroad, and, later, of a few large General Hospitals, these hospitals existed only in time of war. The Marching or Field Hospitals had disappeared after Marlborough's campaigns, and the only war hospitals were now the General Hospitals.

The officers of these hospitals were gathered together on the outbreak of war, as required, from the ranks of the general medical profession, or from those who had served in former campaigns and were on half-pay.

The officers of hospitals included Hospital Mates, Deputy Purveyors, Purveyors, Apothecaries, Surgeons, Physicians, and Directors.

It is interesting to note the wording of the Gazette notifications of these Officers of Hospitals. The earlier appointments were made "to Our Hospital or Hospitals," or "to the Hospital created for the service of the British Forces," in some place where active service operations were in progress or which was held by one of our garrisons. Other appointments were made "to the Hospital" or "to the Staff" of a General Commanding an Expeditionary Force. Occasionally Medical Officers were gazetted under the heading of "Staff Officers," for instance when Bruce and Knox became Staff Officers in N. America in 1776.[1]

[1] See ROLL, Nos. 567 and 598.

About 1790 the Gazette notifications appear under the heading "Medical Staff," and we find officers commissioned as Physician or Surgeon, "to the Forces". In 1793 the headings "Staff" and "Hospital Staff" began to be used, the latter appearing in the London Gazette forty-eight times in that year, many of the appointments under that head being for a particular service, such as, "Surgeon to the Forces under the Earl of Moira". Medical Officers were gazetted under the heading "Hospital Staff" for the last time in the London Gazette, 14 Aug. 1860, and for the first time under the heading "Medical Department" in the London Gazette, 24 Aug. 1860. In the Army List Staff Medical Officers were shown under the heading "Medical Department—Medical Staff".

Hospital Mates, or "Mates in General Hospitals," were warrant officers, those for medical duties being appointed by the Physician-General, those for surgical duties by the Surgeon-General, but, after the establishment of a Medical Board in 1756 appointments were made by the Board. After 1798 the Surgeon-General stated the number of Hospital Mates required, and the Inspector of Hospitals appointed them, after a medical examination had been held, by examiners appointed by the College of Surgeons, in the presence of the Surgeon-General and of the Inspector of Hospitals.[1]

By Royal Warrant issued on 22 May 1804, Hospital Mates were divided into two classes, a Commissioned Class and a Warrant Class. The former were commissioned as Hospital Mates for General Service and are frequently referred to as Commissioned Hospital Mates. The other class, Hospital Mates appointed for temporary or local service, received Warrants only and were designated either Warrant Hospital Mates, Hospital Mates for Temporary Service, or Hospital Mates for Local Service. This Royal Warrant took effect from 25 Dec. 1803. The first Commissions, however, did not appear in the London Gazette until 25 July 1809, when twenty-three "gentlemen" were gazetted "Hospital Mates for General Service". The last batch to be gazetted to this rank received their Commissions on 20 April 1813. Corresponding changes in designation were made in the half-pay lists in the Army Lists of 1804.

On 8 June 1813 H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief approved of "gentlemen receiving appointments in the Medical Department of the Army being in future styled Hospital Assistant to the Forces, and those appointed by Warrant will still retain the term Hospital Mate";[2] but Hospital Mates were to be encouraged by the Medical Board "to improve themselves towards a due qualification for admission as commissioned officers".

The rank of Hospital Assistant to the Forces was abolished by the Royal Warrant of 29 July 1830, and those holding this rank became Staff Assistant Surgeons from the date of the warrant. This warrant also laid down that Assistant Surgeons should have seven years' service before promotion to the rank of Staff Surgeon.

[1] See Fifth Report Mil. Inquiry, 1808.

[2] P.R.O., W.O. 7/108.

Hospital Assistants on half-pay were still shown as such in the Army List, but when restored to full-pay became Staff Assistant Surgeons.

During the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny many civilian Surgeons received appointments in the Army as Acting Assistant Surgeons, and such appointments had been common in the Ordnance Medical Department as a probationary rank before being Commissioned as Assistant Surgeon. Acting Assistant Surgeons did not receive Commissions and therefore do not appear in this ROLL. They received on appointment 10s. a day pay and £40 for uniform. If afterwards Commissioned as Assistant Surgeons (it was decided in 1857) they were to reckon their service in the Acting Appointment towards promotion and retirement.

Deputy Purveyors and Purveyors.—Purveyors first appeared in our service in the Marching and General Hospitals established by William III. The original Purveyor was appointed "to perform the duty of butler for distributing the provisions to the sick and wounded".[1] He was in fact the Commissariat Officer to the hospital and had the purchase and distribution of food and medical comforts and all accounts dealing with these matters in his charge. Deputy Purveyors entered the Army long after Purveyors had existed. Both ranks were well paid, and for this reason were much sought after. Purveyors were taken from Medical Officers as a step in promotion, and it was laid down by a Royal Warrant in 1798 that they should be "taken from amongst the senior Staff or Regimental Officers whose pay was only ten or twelve shillings a day". They appear to have been recommended for appointment by the Surgeon-General until 1798, and Surgeon-General Keate introduced a method of selection from persons versed in accounts, not necessarily Medical Officers. After 1798 the appointments rested with the Inspector of Hospitals. The number of Purveyors and Deputy Purveyors was few; in 1807 there were only eight Purveyors and fourteen Deputy Purveyors, and all these were serving in hospitals abroad, except one Purveyor, acting as assistant to the Surgeon-General, and two Deputy Purveyors at the York and Depôt Hospitals. As they were no longer promoted from the ranks of the Medical Officers, the Commissioners of Military Inquiry, in their fifth Report in 1808, considered them to be over-paid. On 29 July 1830 the Commander-in-Chief considered it entirely unnecessary to maintain a distinct class of persons as a component part of the Medical Establishment of the Army. At this time there were no Purveyors and only five Deputy Purveyors, distributed one at Fort Pitt, two in Ireland, one in Jamaica, and one in Gibraltar. They were performing the duties of clerks, and it was decided these were to remain until vacancies occurred. No further appointments were made and the Purveyor's branch was practically abolished. A Royal Warrant, dated 27 April 1853, however, revived this department, laying down that Purveyors to the Forces should form part of the regular establishment of the Army. The three Deputy Purveyors still serving became Purveyors under this warrant, and others were appointed. The warrant described their duties as "providing provisions for the sick, paying Hospital Sergeants and Servants, and carrying on all the financial affairs of the several Regimental and other Military Hospitals". It added "such Officers may with advantage be called upon to perform similar duties in other Branches of the Service". Purveyors were to rank as subalterns for the first fifteen years of their service, and after that time as Captains, but as juniors of that rank. A fresh Royal Warrant appeared on 31 Oct. 1855, extending the ranks and classes of the Purveyor's Department so that the Department consisted of a Purveyor in Chief, a Deputy Purveyor-in-Chief, Purveyors, and Purveyors Clerks of two classes, first and second.

Apothecary's Mates first appeared in our Army in 1690, and most were appointed during the eighteenth century. They were Commissioned Officers. The first appointments, in the reign of William III, were made to hospitals, but most of them were gazetted to garrisons and were occasionally designated in the Gazette as Garrison Apothecary's Mates. The last Commission to the rank was that of William Rogers, Apoth. Mate, N. America, 15 Aug. 1758.

Apothecaries.—In the earliest establishment laid down for hospitals in the reign of William III, we find "a Master-Apothecary to each hospital and three Apothecary's Mates".[1] With his troops in the Low Countries there were six large hospitals, and to these were appointed altogether one Master-Apothecary and eight Apothecary's Mates. There were also three Supernumerary Apothecary's Mates. The appointment of Master-Apothecary was apparently given to the Senior Apothecary in a hospital or to the Senior Apothecary to a force in the field. Several instances will be found in this ROLL. Apparently the last Master-Apothecary appointed was Arthur Edwards, a Surgeon, who became Master-Apothecary, N. America, 8 Oct. 1778. It may be noted that when a Master-Apothecary went on half-pay he was invariably shown as an Apothecary only in the half-pay lists. It is scarcely necessary to say that an Apothecary's duties were concerned with the care and issue of medicines and medical stores. They were medical men, and in the ROLL will be found instances of Surgeons becoming Apothecaries; but, as a rule, they were selected from the Assistant Surgeons and Hospital Mates, as enjoined by the Royal Warrant of 12 Mar. 1798. Many were men of high medical qualifications and were afterwards promoted to the rank of Physician. Apothecaries continued to be Commissioned in our Army until the appearance of the Royal Warrant of 29 July 1830, when the rank of Apothecary to the Forces was abolished. On 23 Oct. 1854, a Royal Warrant was issued, signed by Sidney Herbert, re-establishing the rank of Apothecaries to the Forces. The new Apothecaries were to rank as Lieutenants for the first fifteen years of their service, and after that time as Captains, but as juniors of that rank. No Apothecary could claim to retire on half-pay under thirty years' service unless invalided out of the service. The new Apothecaries were not of the same medical standing as those appointed before this Warrant, they were, in fact, chiefly promoted from the ranks of the Dispensers of Medicines. The re-organisation which resulted from the publication of the Royal Warrant of 1 Oct. 1858 led to the disappearance of Apothecaries to the Forces from our Army. No fresh appointments to the rank were made. Some of them became Officers of Orderlies in the newly constituted Army Hospital Corps, but at least one lingered on in the service with this old rank until he had nearly completed his full thirty years' service.

Staff Surgeons.—This designation applied to all Surgeons not belonging to regiments who were employed on the Staff of a General in the field, or in a General Hospital, or Garrison. They were selected and recommended by the Surgeon-General, and down to the time of the appointment of a Director-General, were posted by him to the General Hospitals, Camps, or Districts as required, and they were under his jurisdiction throughout their career.[1] They were usually promoted from the ranks of the Hospital Mates, Apothecaries, and Regimental Surgeons. On the expansion of the Medical Staff on the outbreak of war Staff Surgeons on half-pay were recalled to the active list. (If unfit for foreign service they either remained on half-pay or were allowed to serve with the Fencible Regiments or with the Militia.) Many civilian Surgeons also received direct Commissions as Staff Surgeons. When peace came the Staff Surgeons, with the exception of those posted to permanent garrisons, disappeared from the active list, being placed on half-pay. For instance, during the American War of Independence there were at one time twenty-one Surgeons to the hospitals in America and the West Indies, but, a few years after that war, in 1787, all the officers of the hospitals were on half-pay, only eight Garrison Surgeons at home and eleven Garrison Surgeons abroad being retained on the active list. During the eighteenth century we occasionally find a Staff Surgeon designated Surgeon-Major. This does not appear to have been a permanent rank but indicated the Senior Surgeon in a hospital, garrison, or command. This custom also obtained in India where the Senior Surgeon of a small force in the field was called Surgeon-Major, just as the Senior Surgeon of an Army was at times designated Surgeon-General.[2] Such ranks were temporary and local only, although for the time being they carried with them a higher rate of pay. In Gibraltar, however, the Senior Surgeon to the Garrison held the rank of Surgeon-Major throughout the century. In his Record of Service, John Crane, M.D., Apothecary to the Forces, speaks of Acting as Surgeon Major in Minorca between 1769 and 1787. Most of the Surgeons-Major were appointed to garrisons. The title re-appeared as a distinctive rank in the next century.

[1] Fifth Report Mil. Inquiry, 1808.
[2] There are some instances given in Crawford's History of the Indian Medical Service.

From the nature of their employment, chiefly with forces in the field, Surgeons to the Forces were usually on foreign service. Thus, in 1807, of sixty Surgeons to the Forces all were abroad except seven.[1] As time went on slight improvements were made in the pay and half-pay of Staff Surgeons. A Royal Warrant, dated 29 July 1830, laid down that all Surgeons must have served ten years on full pay before promotion to the next rank.

On 14 Oct. 1840 a Royal Warrant appeared by which Staff Surgeons were divided into two classes—Staff Surgeons, First Class, and Staff Surgeons, Second Class. The latter in rank and pay corresponded and were on a footing with Regimental Surgeons, while those of the First Class were given higher rank and rates of pay. It was further enjoined by this warrant that a Staff Surgeon of the First Class must serve three years at home or two years abroad before becoming eligible for promotion, and Regimental and Staff Surgeons of the Second Class could not be promoted until they had completed ten years' service on full pay in the Army. A Horse Guards Memorandum of 17 Sept. 1841 gave the Staff Surgeon, First Class, the relative rank of Major; those of the Second Class the relative rank of Captain.

On 1 October 1858 the grades of Medical Officers were again altered, the classes of Staff Surgeons disappeared, and the only titles of Surgeons in the Army were Staff or Regimental Surgeon. Surgeons, however, by this warrant, after twenty years' full-pay service in any rank became Surgeons-Major, and officers holding the rank of Staff Surgeon of the First Class became, without further Gazette notification, Surgeons-Major from the date of their Commissions as Staff Surgeons of the First Class. Thirty Regimental Surgeons and Staff Surgeons of the Second Class, who had completed twenty years' full-pay service were gazetted Surgeon-Major from 1 Oct. 1858 [L.G. of 9 Oct. 1858]. This warrant also did away with all differential treatment as regards status and pay between Regimental and Staff Surgeons. All Assistant Surgeons were now obliged to pass an examination before promotion to Surgeon, and were required to have served on full pay for five years, "of which two shall have been passed in or with a regiment". A Surgeon, whether Regimental or Staff, was required to have ten years' full-pay service, two of which must have been passed in the rank of Surgeon, before he became eligible for promotion to higher rank. The relative rank of a Surgeon was that of Major according to the date of his Commission, that of a Surgeon-Major, as Lieutenant-Colonel, but junior of that rank. Such relative rank was to carry with it all precedence and advantages attaching to the rank with which it corresponded, except as regarded Presidency of Courts Martial. Also where choice of quarters was concerned the Officer commanding the regiment or detachment had preference.

In 1861 a further warrant laid down that Surgeons promoted on or after 28 March 1861 should have the relative rank of Major, but junior in that rank. This was, however, cancelled by a Royal Warrant, dated 1 May 1863, which stated that relative rank carried with it "all precedence and advantages attaching to the military rank with which it corresponds, and shall regulate the rates of lodging money, number of servants, rations of fuel and light, etc." "But, such relative rank shall not entitle the holder to any military command of any kind whatsoever, nor to the Presidency of Courts Martial, Courts of Inquiry, Committees, or Boards of Survey."

In 1802 a new class of Staff Surgeon had been introduced. They were termed District Surgeons, or Surgeons "to a Recruiting District," and were so commissioned. Twenty-six of these officers were employed in 1808. In 1810 they were replaced by Staff Surgeons.[1]

Physicians.—Physicians were commissioned on the recommendation of the Physician-General. Most were appointed directly from civilian life, but others were promoted from the ranks of the Apothecaries and Surgeons. They were always men of higher medical qualifications than the Surgeons, at least such was the intention, and we find that most of them were in possession of University degrees or were licentiates, members, or fellows of the College of Physicians of London. The Physicians were looked upon as the élite of the medical profession in the service and were paid at a rate very much higher than that received by the Regimental or Staff Surgeons. Whatever the medical qualifications of the latter might be they were practically excluded from chances of promotion to this rank. The Physicians-General very jealously guarded their privilege of recommending Physicians to Commissions in the Army. Some Surgeons in the earlier periods of this ROLL did get promotion to Physician, but they either held a medical degree, were licentiates of the London College, or were required to obtain the licence. When John Hunter had control of the Army Medical Service, the Physician-General being an invalid and unable to attend to his duties, he made it a rule that no person should hold the rank of Physician who was not, or had not been a Staff Surgeon, Regimental Surgeon, or Apothecary. After his death, however, this excellent rule was abrogated, and Sir Lucas Pepys, the new Physician-General, excluded Army Surgeons on educational grounds from advancement to the rank of Physician, although the Royal Warrant of 12 March 1798 had distinctly laid down that a medical degree of Oxford or Cambridge, or a licence from the College of Physicians London, although always desirable, should not be deemed indispensable requisites, and directed that candidates possessing medical degrees from any University in Great Britain or Ireland should be promoted or appointed after an examination held by the Physician-General and two Army Physicians.[2] Robert Jackson broke down the monopoly by being promoted Physician by the Commander-in-Chief in the field. He was, however, practically boycotted by the Army Medical Board and had to promise to obtain the licence of the College of Physicians.

[1] Fifth Report Mil. Inquiry, 1808. [2] Ibid.

In war-time a Physician was appointed to the Staff of the Commander-in-Chief of each Army or Expeditionary Force and became his personal medical attendant. Others were appointed to the larger hospitals or to the garrisons. In this ROLL the earlier appointments are all to Garrisons or to Garrison Companies, such as "the Eight Independent Companies in Jamaica". The first Physician to a Commander-in-Chief was George Martin, who was commissioned "Physician to Lord Cathcart, Commander-in-Chief, Expedition to the West Indies," on 26 Dec. 1739. Later, Physicians were appointed to the Forces in Flanders, the Low Countries, Germany, etc., that is, to troops engaged in active operations overseas. When doing duty in an hospital we find the Apothecary acting as the Physician's Assistant, performing the duties of a clinical clerk to him, in addition to his own particular work in connection with the issue of medicines and care of medical stores. Physicians were never numerous in the Army. During the War of Independence in America only ten were employed at one time in North America and the West Indies, although the greater part of the Army was employed in those places. In 1807 there were seventeen Physicians on the establishment, and only two of these were employed at home, at York Hospital and the Depôt, Isle of Wight.[1]

On 29 July 1811 instructions were issued, by Horse Guards letter, that Physicians should be chosen from among the Regimental and Staff Surgeons who possessed the degree of M.D. of a University in Great Britain.

Physicians disappeared from the Army under the Royal Warrant of 29 July 1830, in which it was stated "the Title of Physican to the Forces is to be discontinued, and instead thereof, that of Assistant Inspector of Hospitals is to be established".

Directors.—With regard to the higher direction and command of hospitals it has already been noted that at their first establishment Directors were appointed. These Directors, at first appointed over one Hospital, were, later, appointed Directors of Hospitals, Chief Director of Hospitals [see Sir J. Napier], or even Director-General of Hospitals [see Sir C. Wintringham]. The earlier Directors were not necessarily medical men, but soon only medical men, Physicians or Surgeons, were appointed to this rank. Apparently the last Director to be appointed was Sir John Macnamara Hayes who became "Director of the Hospitals under the Earl of Moira," 20 Nov. 1793. During the American War of Independence, in which the greater part of the Army was engaged, there began to appear Inspectors of Hospitals in the Army. Michael Morris was so appointed in Jan. 1777. About the same time we note Inspectors of Regimental Infirmaries, an early appointment to this rank being Hugh Alex. Kennedy, "Inspector of Regimental Infirmaries, North America, July 1777". The title became Inspector of Regimental Hospitals, also in America, when John Lorimer received that rank on 14 Oct. 1782.

[1] List in Fifth Report Mil. Inquiry, 1808.

There was also a Superintendent General of Hospitals for the British Forces in N. America, one John Mervin Nooth, appointed 10 April 1779, who presumably directed all hospitals, General, Garrison, and Regimental, in that command. He was given the permanent rank of Superintendent General of Hospitals on 10 April 1799. The war which broke out with France in 1793 led to further changes in Inspectorial appointments; Assistant Inspectors of Hospitals now appear, about two dozen being appointed between 1795 and 1804. About 1795 was introduced the title of Inspector General of Hospitals. The earliest in this ROLL is John Weir who became I.G. on 16 Sept. 1795. There were only three of these during the latter part of the eighteenth century and all were serving abroad. Another rank, that of Deputy Inspector of Hospitals, appears in the early part of the nineteenth century. Very few were appointed before 1804, and when the grade of A.I.H. was abolished by the Royal Warrant of 22 May 1804 the Assistant Inspectors became Deputy Inspectors.

Principal Medical Officer.—This designation first appeared in our annals in the latter part of the eighteenth century. Directors of Hospitals were not appointed after 1793, and the control or direction of a hospital was placed in the hands of the Senior Medical Officer. This was usually a Physician; but great jealousy existed between Physicians and Surgeons and the administration of the hospitals appears to have suffered. The Secretary of State for War, therefore, empowered the Medical Board early in 1798 to appoint any officer of a hospital (even a Hospital Mate was eligible) to the new rank of Principal Medical Officer with extra pay of five shillings a day.[1] Nomination to the appointment devolved upon the Surgeon-General after 8 March 1798, and he usually appointed Surgeons. The rank, if it may so be called, was temporary and local only, and only applied to General Hospitals. The Commission of Military Inquiry in 1808 condemned the appointment and it fell into disuse.

Assistant Inspector of Hospitals (A.I.H.).—The first appointment to this position, within the period embraced in the ROLL, was that of Robert Jackson, whose Commission was dated 16 Sept. 1795.

The grade was "discontinued" under Royal Warrant of 22 May 1804, and the title of officers serving on full pay as Assistant Inspector, was altered to Deputy Inspector.[2] This was done without Gazette notification, and the dates of these officers' Commissions in their former rank were retained. No alteration was made in the designation of Assistant Inspectors on the half-pay list.

[1] Fifth Report, Commission of Military Inquiry, 1808, p. 18: "It will be proper to notice in this place what is not particularly distinguished in this Full Pay List, that a new rank, and increased pay of five shillings per diem, may be given at the discretion of the Surgeon-General, to . . . even a Hospital Mate, by investing him with the name of Principal Medical Officer. A Medical Officer, so entitled, whatever his previous rank may have been, becomes immediately Chief of the Staff of the Hospital to which he is attached."

[2] Ibid. p. 158.

By Royal Warrant of 29 July 1830, the grade of Assistant Inspector was reintroduced, it having been represented to the King that "it is expedient to change the title of Physician to the Forces, into that of Assistant Inspector of Hospitals". This change in the designation of the officers concerned was made without Gazette notification, and the Army List of 1831 contains the names of the Assistant Inspectors on full pay who had previously been Physicians and who are shown as retaining the dates of their former Commissions. The title of the Physicians on half pay remained unchanged.

Until 1831 there was shown in the Army List a half-pay list of "Assistant Inspectors" separate from the list of half-pay "Physicians". The former consisted of two names:—

William Greaves, 30 Aug. 1799.
Robert Walters, 23 July 1803.

In Army List, 1832, there is a combined half-pay list of "Assistant Inspectors and Physicians" in which the two A.I.H. of the old class above named, and two A.I.H., formerly Physicians—James Weir, 12 Aug. 1819, and William Sibbald, 22 Nov. 1827—are included, all the other officers in this list having served only in the rank of Physician.

This arrangement continued until 1844, when the heading of the List became simply "Assistant Inspectors". It is not clear why this change was made, as the majority of those remaining in the List had never served in any other rank than that of Physician.

By Royal Warrant of 14 Oct. 1840, the provisions of which took effect from the first day of that month, the rank of Assistant Inspector of Hospitals was "dispensed with".

At that date there were five Assistant Inspectors on full pay, and these continued to serve as such until they were promoted. The last of the five obtained his promotion on the 10 Nov. 1843:—

John Davy—promoted I.G. (part. service), 13 Oct. 1840.
John Shortt—promoted D.I.G. 10 Nov. 1843.
Brinsley Nicholson—promoted D.I.G. 26 Jan. 1841.
Charles St. John—promoted D.I.G. 20 Oct. 1843.
Montague Martin Mahony—promoted D.I.G. 29 Oct. 1841.

Inspector of Field Hospitals, or Field Inspector (I.F.H.).—This designation had been conferred on a few officers towards the end of the eighteenth, or in the beginning of the nineteenth century. It was a war appointment, the appointments always being to an Army in the field.

The grade was "discontinued" under Royal Warrant of 22 May 1804; but it does not appear that there was any officer holding this title serving on full pay at that date.

There were, however, three officers of this grade on half pay:—

Alexander Grant, who had been reduced at the conclusion of the American War, and died on half pay as an I.F.H. in 1817.

John White, placed on half pay in 1802, was shown as an Inspector of Field Hospitals in the half-pay list of the Army List up to 1824, and after that his name appears in the list of "Inspectors" until 1828. He died in 1827.

Joseph Cope, who was an I.F.H. of 1 April 1800, is shown on half pay as such in the Army List up to 1824: from 1825 to 1831 he appears in the List as an "Inspector of Hospitals": in the Army List of 1832 he is an "Inspector-General": in that of 1833 he is again shown as I.F.H.: from 1834 to 1836 he once more becomes an "Inspector-General," and from 1837 until his death in 1839, his name is included in the list of "Deputy Inspectors-General".

This appointment ranked below that of D.I.H., for at least one of them was promoted from I.F.H. to D.I.H. (see Abraham Bolton).

Superintendent-General.—This designation had been occasionally given, towards the end of the eighteenth century, to Medical Officers holding superior positions.

The grade was "discontinued" under Royal Warrant of 22 May 1804; but it does not appear that there was any officer holding this title serving on full pay at that date.

John Mervin Nooth, who was a Superintendant-General[1] of 19 Oct. 1775, was on the half-pay list as such until his death in 1828.

Inspector-General (I.G.).—Only a very few officers enjoyed this designation in the end of the eighteenth and beginning of the nineteenth century.

It was "discontinued" under Royal Warrant of 22 May 1804, and at that date no officer holding this title was serving on full pay, with the exception of Mr. Francis Knight, who had been gazetted a member of the Medical Board, 27 Dec. 1801, under the style of "Inspector-General of Army Hospitals".

On the half pay at this date was Thomas Young, the date of whose Commission as Inspector-General of Hospitals was 16 Sept. 1795. His name appears in the Army Lists of 1804 and 1805 as an "Inspector-General," h.p. It is omitted from the Army Lists of 1806 to 1815. In Army Lists of 1816 to 1818 he is called "Inspector of Hospitals": from 1819 to 1831 he is again "Inspector-General"; but curiously, in Army List, 1832, he and Francis Knight, mentioned above, are shown as "Directors-General," and they continued to be so described until their deaths.

The rank of Inspector-General was restored by Royal Warrant of 29 July 1830, and the designation of those officers who were then serving, with the title "Inspector of Hospitals," was changed to "Inspector-General of Hospitals," with no alteration in the date of Commission.

In the London Gazette of 11 Jan. 1831, it was notified that the titles of the officers on the half pay as Inspectors, had been altered to that of Inspector-General from 29 July 1830, "but this change is not to be attended with any additional expense to the Public".

[1] So spelt in the London Gazette and in the Army List until 1817.

[2] This was given effect to in the list of half-pay Medical Officers in Army List of 1832, p. 378.

In illustration of the careless manner in which Medico-Military titles was used, it may be mentioned that when Inspector of Hospitals James Robert Grant had the honour of Knighthood conferred on him by the Prince Regent at Carlton House, 18 March 1819, he was described as Inspector-General of Hospitals.

Deputy Inspector-General (D.I.G.).—As was the case with Inspectors-General, so only very few officers had been designated Deputy Inspector-General in the end of the eighteenth century.

The title was "discontinued" under Royal Warrant of 22 May 1804, and at that time no officer serving on full pay held this designation.

The only officer of this rank on the half pay at this date was George Pinckard, a D.I.G. of 20 Aug. 1799. His name appeared in the Army List on half pay as a Deputy Inspector-General until 1811, but from 1812 until his death, which occurred in 1835, his name is included in the half-pay list of Deputy Inspectors.

Alexander Robertson, a D.I.H. of 25 June 1801, who had never been a D.I.G., was shown as such in the half-pay list, from 1806 until 1811, but was similarly transferred to the half-pay list of Deputy Inspectors in Army List, 1812.

The rank of Deputy Inspector-General was restored by Royal Warrant of 29 July 1830, and the designation of those officers who were then serving, with the title "Deputy Inspector of Hospitals," was changed to "Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals," with no alteration in the date of Commission.

In the London Gazette of 11 Jan. 1831, it was notified that the titles of the officers on the half pay as Deputy Inspectors had been altered to that of Deputy Inspector-General from 29 July 1830, "but this change is not to be attended with any additional expense to the Public".

Medical Officers to Artillery.—As will be gathered from some of the earlier entries in this ROLL, when an Army took the field it was accompanied by a Train of Artillery. These Trains were only mobilised on the outbreak of war, and Surgeons were always appointed to them. These earlier Artillery Surgeons appear to have been commissioned,[1] but when a nucleus of Artillery began to be maintained on the peace establishment in Ireland and at Woolwich, we find that the Surgeons and their Mates were no longer commissioned but only Warrant Officers whose warrants were signed by the Master-General of the Ordnance. The Master-General of the Ordnance held his appointment direct from the Crown, and was not under the Commander-in-Chief. So arose a Medical Department distinct from the Army Medical Department. Some account of this Department is necessary before again taking up the story of the Army Medical Department after the two Departments became one in 1855. It should be noted that the Ordnance never had any Physicians and only once a Physician-General, Richard Brocklesby.

[1] Dalton includes several in his English Army Lists and Commission Registers. Jno. de Quavre, Chirurgeon to the Artillery Train in Flanders, 1694, may be mentioned (Treasury Papers, vol. xxvi. p. 55).

The Medical Department of the Ordnance.—Until the year 1804 the Medical Officers held only Warrants from the Master-General of the Ordnance; after that period, all the different ranks held Commissions from the Crown, excepting the Supernumerary, Extra, and Temporary Assistant Surgeons.[1]

The Medical Officers, previously borne on the establishment of the Royal Regiment of Artillery and Brigade of Horse Artillery, were by Royal Warrant addressed to the Master-General of the Ordnance, 1 Sept. 1801, formed into a separate establishment denominated the Medical Establishment for the Military Department of the Ordnance.

Not, however, until 1814 was a separate heading "Ordnance Medical Department" inserted in the Army List. Even then the list of these officers continued to be shown under the Royal Regiment of Artillery, following the list of Quartermasters of the Regiment; but in Army List 1820, the Ordnance Medical Department is shown as an establishment, entirely separate from the Royal Artillery and is inserted after the Royal Engineers.

By Royal Warrant dated 12 Dec. 1814, the denomination of this department became the Medical Establishment for the Military and Civil Departments of the Ordnance; but no change in its description was made in the Army List.

By Royal Warrant dated 14 Feb. 1853, the superintendence of the Army Medical Department and of the Ordnance Medical Department was consolidated and entrusted to one officer, and Inspector-General Andrew Smith, at that time Superintendent of the Army Medical Department, was appointed Director-General of the Army and Ordnance Medical Departments from 25 Feb. 1853 (L.G. No. 2145, p. 604). On 26 Dec. of the same year, the two departments were merged into one, as the Army and Ordnance Medical Department and the Medical Officers became interchangeable as regards appointments in the line or Artillery and were treated as on one list for promotion.[2]

In Army Lists of 1854-55, 1855-56, 1856-57, the Army Medical Department and the Ordnance Medical Department continued to be shown separately; but Inspector-General Andrew Smith is shown as Director-General at the head of each list.

[1] List of Officers of the Royal Regiment of Artillery, p. 173.

[2] This change anticipated the great alteration in military organisation regarding the War Office and Board of Ordnance which was made in 1855.

On 14 Aug. 1855 an Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 117) received the Royal assent, vesting all the estates and powers of the Board of Ordnance in the Secretary of State for the War Department; but previously, on 23 May 1855, Lord Panmure, then Secretary of State for War, conveyed to Viscount Hardinge, then Commander-in-Chief, Her Majesty's pleasure, "that he (Lord Hardinge) should forthwith assume the command of the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers, and in all respects conduct the military duties of these Corps".—List of Officers of the Royal Artillery, 1900, p. 173.

In the Army List of 1857-58 the Ordnance Medical Department disappeared, and Medical Officers are again shown as belonging to the Royal Artillery, just as they were before 1814.

In the Monthly Army List for Aug. 1862, and in the annual Army List of 1863-64, regimental Medical Officers are shown in the Royal Engineers, two Surgeons and five Assistant Surgeons having been gazetted to that Corps.

Designation of Ranks of Officers.—R.A. 1783. The designation of Medical Officers of the Royal Artillery were until 1783 those of Surgeon and Surgeon's Mate; although in the Army List of 1766, James Irwin, who had previously been called Surgeon, was for some unexplained reason called Surgeon-General; but next year he is given his original title of Surgeon.

1784. In the Army List of 1784 the Surgeon, R.A., becomes Surgeon-General, and the Surgeons' Mates become Surgeons.

1797-1800. In the Army List of 1798 the grade of Assistant Surgeon, R.A., appears for the first time; the designation of Surgeon's Mate having been changed to Assistant Surgeon in May 1797. In the case of those then serving the date of appointment as Surgeon's Mate is given as the date of Assistant Surgeon's Commission.

O.M.D. 1801. By Royal Warrant of 1 Sept. 1801, under which, as before stated, the Ordnance Medical Department was formed, the following grades were established:—

(1) Surgeon-General.
(2) Senior Surgeon.
(3) Surgeon.
(4) Senior Assistant Surgeon. }
(5) Assistant Surgeon. } One grade.
(6) Supernumerary Assistant Surgeon. }

The distinction between Senior Surgeon and Surgeon was not shown in the Army List until 1804, when four officers were shown in the higher grade, retaining the dates of their original appointments as Surgeons, but as the rank of Senior Surgeon was not recognised in Royal Warrant of 27 June 1804, this grading disappears in the next (1805) Army List.[1] The three varieties of Assistant Surgeons (4), (5), and (6) were never differentiated in the Army List, as they apparently were meant merely to convey a distinction as regards rate of pay, etc.

1804. By Royal Warrant of 27 June 1804, with effect from 1 Jan. 1804, under which the advantages that by Royal Warrant of 22 May 1804 had been granted to Regimental Surgeons of the Army were extended to the Ordnance Medical Department, the following grades were established:—

(1) Surgeon-General and Inspector.
(2) Assistant Surgeon-General and Deputy Inspector.

[1] The grade of Senior Surgeon was re-introduced by Royal Warrant of 16 Jan. 1841, and abolished by Royal Warrant of 1 Oct. 1858.

(3) Surgeon.
(4) Assistant Surgeon.
(5) Supernumerary Assistant Surgeon.
} One grade.

In the Army List of 1805 the title of the Surgeon-General was altered accordingly, the officer at the head of the list of the Senior Surgeons became Assistant Surgeon-General and Deputy Inspector, while the other Senior Surgeons reverted to the designation of Surgeon, and curiously the date of appointment of every officer in the department was at the same time altered to 1 April 1804.

1806. Under Royal Warrant of 25 July 1806, with effect from 1 Aug. 1806, an Inspector-General of Ordnance Hospitals was added to the establishment; Sir John Macnamara Hayes, Bt., who had previously served as a Surgeon in the Line, having been commissioned to this office 7 May 1806 with a salary of £3 a day.

The grades sanctioned by this Warrant were :—

(1) Inspector-General of Ordnance Hospitals.
(2) Surgeon-General and Inspector.
(3) Assistant Surgeon-General and Deputy Inspector.
(4) Surgeon.
(5) Assistant Surgeon.
(6) Supernumerary Assistant Surgeon.

1808-9. In the Army List of 1808 an Apothecary who up to this date had been Acting Assistant Surgeon was added to the establishment with date of Commission, 1 Oct. 1806, and in the Army List of 1809 a new grade of officers, designated Second Assistant Surgeons, appears, the date of appointment of the senior of these being 1 Aug. 1806. Authority for these changes is not traced before the publication of the Royal Warrant of 21 Feb. 1812 when these ranks are included in the authorised establishment.

1812-13. In Army List of 1812 four officers are graded as Extra Assistant Surgeons,[1] but in next Army List (1813) they are absorbed into the list of Second Assistant Surgeons.

Under Royal Warrant of 21 Feb. 1812, with effect from 13 Nov. 1811 and so shown in the Army List of 1813, the grades were :—

(1) Inspector-General.
(2) Surgeon-General and Inspector.
(3) Assistant Surgeon-General and Deputy Inspector.
(4) Resident Surgeon.
(5) Surgeon.
(6) Apothecary.
(7) Assistant Surgeon.
(8) Second Assistant Surgeon.

The date of appointment of the two Surgeons selected for the new grade of Resident Surgeon was 13 Mar. 1812.

[1] Royal Warrant, 21 Feb. 1812, lays down that all Extra appointments are to be held as temporary.

1812-14. In Army List of 1814, the first in which the heading Ordnance Medical Department appears, the designation of the Inspector-General was altered to Director-General, in accordance with Royal Warrant of 1 Aug. 1813, which took effect from 2 Dec. 1812 and sanctioned the following grades:—

(1) Director-General.
(2) Surgeon-General and Inspector.
(3) Assistant Surgeon-General and Deputy Inspector.
(4) Resident Surgeon.
(5) Surgeon.
(6) Apothecary.
(7) Assistant Surgeon.
(8) Second Assistant Surgeon.

1822-23. In Army List of 1823 the grade of Assistant Surgeon and Deputy Inspector disappeared, the holder of that position being promoted to be Surgeon-General and Inspector, and the vacancy in the inferior grade not filled up. This was in accordance with the establishment laid down in Royal Warrant of 13 Mar. 1822, which took effect from 1 Jan. 1822, and which was as follows:—

(1) Director-General.
(2) Surgeon-General and Inspector.
(3) Resident Surgeon.
(4) Surgeon.
(5) Apothecary.
(6) Assistant Surgeon.
(7) Second Assistant Surgeon.

1829. In Army List of 1829 the grades shown are:—

(1) Director-General.
(2) Resident Surgeon.
(3) Surgeon.
(4) Apothecary.
(5) First Assistant Surgeon.
(6) Second Assistant Surgeon.

The grade of "Surgeon-General and Inspector" disappears, the officer who held that appointment having retired on 1 Jan. 1829, and this vacancy was not filled. The officers formerly shown as Assistant Surgeons are now denominated First Assistant Surgeons.

This latter distinction of class had been recognised in the establishment approved by Royal Warrant of 21 Feb. 1812 (when the class of Second Assistant Surgeon was first approved) as well as in all subsequent warrants, although it was not shown in the Army List until the lapse of seventeen years.

1831. By Royal Warrant 1 Aug. 1831, taking effect from 1 July 1831, the rank of Second Assistant Surgeon was abolished, and the title of Resident Surgeon was altered to Assistant Inspector of Ordnance

Hospitals. The following then became the ranks of the Ordnance Medical Department, as duly set forth in Army List of 1832 :—

(1) Director-General.
(2) Assistant Inspector.
(3) Surgeon.
(4) Apothecary.
(5) Assistant Surgeon.

The Assistant Inspector is assigned the date of his previous Commission as Resident Surgeon ; but the Second Assistant Surgeons who were promoted to the rank of Assistant Surgeons are given 1 July 1831 as the date of their new appointments.

1841. By Royal Warrant of 15 Jan. 1841 the grade of Senior Surgeon was re-introduced,[1] and no provision was made for filling up the appointment of Apothecary to the Ordnance which had become vacant by the death of Apothecary William Harris on 29 April 1840.

The Army List of 1842 shows these changes, the date of the Senior Surgeon's appointment being given as 16 Jan. 1841, and the grades enumerated are :—

(1) Director-General.
(2) Deputy Inspector-General.
(3) Senior Surgeon.
(4) Surgeon.
(5) Assistant Surgeon.

1850. By Royal Warrant of 13 March 1850, taking effect from 1 April 1850, an Inspector-General takes the place of a Director-General, and Sir John Webb having retired on the latter date, Inspector-General James Stewart was placed at the head of the department. The various grades under this Warrant, duly set forth in Army List of 1851-52, were :—

(1) Inspector-General.
(2) Deputy Inspector-General.
(3) Senior Surgeon.[2]
(4) Surgeon.
(5) Assistant Surgeon.

1853. These continued to be the grades of the Officers of the Ordnance Medical Department until 25 Feb. 1853, when as mentioned above Dr. Andrew Smith was appointed Director-General of the Army and Ordnance Medical Departments.

1855. By Act of Parliament (18 & 19 Vict. c. 117) in 1855 the command of the Ordnance was handed over to the Commander-in-Chief and the Board of Ordnance abolished. The Ordnance Medical Department was after this date, 25 May 1855, merged in the Army Medical Department, but two Deputy Inspectors remained on the active list until 1859.[1]

III. The Superintendence of the Army Medical Service.—As will have been gathered from references in the previous pages, the early control or direction of the medical affairs of the Army was entirely in the hands of the Physician-General and the Surgeon-General.

The Physician-General recommended Physicians for Commissions as such in the Army, and he appears to have had some slight control, through the Physicians, over the Apothecaries and the medical side of the General Hospitals. He also presided over the examination of candidates for appointmeut as Hospital Mates. Practically all other medical concerns of the Army were under the direction of the Surgeon-General. He recommended Surgeons and Mates to hospitals and regiments, and dealt with the appointment of the other officers to hospitals (except Physicians). The Physician-General also had charge of the inspection of medicines supplied by the Apothecary-General, whose bills were passed for payment by the Physician-General and the Surgeon-General.[2]

The medical affairs and patronage of the Army in Ireland were directed by a Surgeon-General and Physician-General in Ireland. They were appointed by Letters Patent. Similarly officers of these ranks were appointed to Scotland, but their powers appear to have been more limited.

There were no changes in the medical direction of the Army until 1756 when "a distinctive administrative organisation for the Army Medical Department was for the first time introduced by order of the Duke of Cumberland, Lord Barrington being Secretary of State for War. A Board was established consisting of Physicians of the hospitals to His Majesty's Forces, the Surgeon-General, the Principal Surgeon and Purveyor to the Hospitals, who had it given them in charge conjointly to digest certain rules for regulating all hospital matters, in order that this part of the medical service (including medicines, hospital stores, and other provisions for the sick) might be carried into execution with ability, regularity and despatch."[3] There is little record of this Medical Board, its powers appear soon to have lapsed and returned into the hands of the Surgeon-General and Physician-General. Hennen, however, states that when the new appointment of Inspector of Regimental Infirmaries was made its duties were vested in him.[4] This Medical Board had no patronage, its duties being confined to hospital concerns.

There were no further changes until 1790 when John Hunter became Surgeon-General and Inspector of Regimental Infirmaries. His colleague, Sir Clifton Wintringham, the Physician-General, was a very old man and an invalid, so that, until Hunter's death in 1793 practically the whole of the medical affairs of the Army devolved on him. During his rule the war with France broke out, and Hunter had to provide for no less than ten expeditions overseas. He died in 1793 of apoplexy, the result of a quarrel with John Gunning, who had accused him of favouritism in some of his appointments. Hunter was succeeded by John Gunning as Surgeon-General and by John Keate as Inspector of Regimental Hospitals. The whole of the medical patronage was placed in the hands of these two officers by the Secretary of State for War, pending the appointment of a successor to Wintringham. They were directed to consult together concerning all medical appointments (including Physicians), and all recommendations were to be signed by both officers [W.O. Letter, 17 Oct. 1793]. When Wintringham died he was succeeded as Physician-General by Sir Lucas Pepys, on 15 Jan. 1794, and from this date the three officers, Physician-General, Surgeon-General, and Inspector of Regimental Hospitals, constituted the Army Medical Board. From this date also until March 1798 all medical appointments were made by the Board collectively. During this period the Inspector of Hospitals became the medium of communication with the Commander-in-Chief, and on him fell the responsibility of the supply of Medical Officers to the hospitals, hospitals, medical stores, and equipment, for the numerous expeditions then fitted out [Fifth Report of Mil. Inquiry].

By the Royal Warrant of 12 March 1798 the Medical Board was discontinued. We find, however, in fact, it was still continually referred to as the Medical Board in official documents, and was so called when a new organisation was brought in twelve years later. This warrant laid down that "the Physician-General, the Surgeon-General, and the Inspector of Regimental Hospitals shall each have his distinct province of business, and of recommendation, and be each made openly and solely responsible for his own acts". The province of the Physician-General was to recommend Physicians, when required to be added to any establishment at home or abroad. With the Surgeon-General he was to inspect the medicines of the Army and examine and check the bills of the Apothecary-General. He was also President of Medical Boards on officers, when their cases were medical, and presided at the examination of candidates for Regimental or Staff Commissions in the Medical Service of the Army. The Surgeon-General recommended Staff and Regimental Surgeons and Assistants, selected Staff Surgeons and posted them to the General Hospitals, Camps, and Districts, called upon the Inspector of Regimental Hospitals to supply Apothecaries and Hospital Mates, and appointed the remaining staff of all General Hospitals, for the management of which he was to be responsible. He was to correspond with the Heads of all hospitals abroad. He presided at Medical Boards on officers when the cases were surgical, and assisted at the examination of Hospital Mates. The Inspector of Regimental Hospitals recommended all Hospital Mates, Apothecaries, Purveyors, and Deputies and the inferior officers, on the formation of any new establishment. He inspected all

Regimental Hospitals at home and was responsible for their management. He attended the Surgeon-General at Medical Boards on officers, in surgical cases, and assisted at the Medical examination of Hospital Mates. In 1798 Keate became Surgeon-General and was succeeded as Inspector of Regimental Hospitals by John Rush. John Rush died in 1801 and was followed in his appointment by Francis Knight. Knight was, however, designated Inspector-General of Army Hospitals. This was the first appointment to this rank, a rank which existed until 1 March 1873. Frequent quarrels occurred amongst these members of the Army Medical Board, and their controversies became subject of public and Parliamentary concern. At last the ineptitude exhibited by the Board in connection with the disastrous Walcheren campaign led to the breaking up of the Board, and on 27 Feb. 1810 the following appeared in the London Gazette :—

"ARMY MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

"His Majesty has been pleased to approve of the following officers being appointed, and formed into a Board for superintending and conducting the whole Medical Business of the Army, viz. :—

John Weir, Esq., to be Director-General.

Theodore Gordon, M.D., } to be Principal Inspectors."[1]
Charles Kerr, M.D., }

The appointments were dated 24 Feb. 1810. All three officers were promoted from half pay as Inspector of Hospitals. There was no change in the constitution of the Board until 25 Dec. 1815, when the number of members was reduced from three to two. Sir James McGrigor was now D.G.; he had been appointed on 13 June 1815 [L.G. notification, 24 June 1815]. He and his colleague, Sir William Franklin, "for nearly twenty years sat at the same table" [McGrigor's Autobiography]. When Franklin retired on 1 July 1833, no Principal Inspector was appointed in his place.

Sir James McGrigor retired on 6 Feb. 1851, and on 7 Feb. 1851 his successor Andrew Smith was gazetted "to be Inspector-General of Hospitals and to be Superintendent of the Army Medical Department". This change of designation was altered on 25 Feb. 1853, Inspector-General Andrew Smith, M.D., Superintendent of the Army Medical Department, being then gazetted "Director-General of the Army and Ordnance Medical Departments". After the Ordnance Medical Department had been merged in the Army Medical Department, the Director-General was shown in War Office establishments as Director-General, Army Medical Department, and all later appointments were as Director-General, Army Medical Department. Only twice have temporary appointments to the rank of Director-General been made. The first was "vice Surgeon General J. Jameson, M.D., C.B., K.H.S., retired," when Surgeon-General A. F.

[1] Only four appointments were made to this rank. The pay was £1200 per annum.

Preston, M.B., became Director-General on 3 June 1901 [L.G. 21 June 1901]. The tenure of his temporary appointment expired when Surgeon-General W. Taylor, M.D., C.B., K.H.P., was gazetted Director-General on 2 Dec. 1901 [L.G. 13 Dec. 1901]. The second and last occasion on which a Director-General was appointed "temporarily" was at the end of October 1914, when the Director-General, Sir A. T. Sloggett, K.C.B., C.M.G., K.H.S., proceeded overseas to the chief Expeditionary Force as Director-General, Medical Services in the field, and Sir Alfred Keogh, G.C.B., M.D., F.R.C.P., became Director-General, temporary, at the War Office.

Rank of the Director-General.—Until it was laid down in the Royal Warrant of 7 Aug. 1891 that the Director-General should hold the substantive rank of Surgeon-Major-General, the Head of the Medical Department had no other recognised rank or title beyond that of Director-General. Director-General was just as much a rank as any other departmental grade. This is shown by the holders of that appointment, whether on the active or retired lists, being credited with no other rank or title in the official Army Lists, and is apparent when one looks at the terms of the Gazette of 7 May 1899, where it was stated "Director-General Sir Thomas Crawford, K.C.B., M.D., F.R.C.S.I., Q.H.S., has been granted retired pay. Dated 7 May 1889."

In the rules regarding relative rank, when the first consolidated Royal Warrant for Pay and Promotion appeared in 1866, the Director-General is shown with the relative rank of Major-General, as also were the senior Inspector-Generals of Hospitals. In the Royal Warrant for Pay, 1 May 1878, the Director-General of the Army Medical Department is enumerated as a separate grade from Surgeon-General, and the same obtains in later warrants as regards rank for purposes of precedence after the abolition of relative rank. In the Quarterly Army List of Oct. 1891 and in the Monthly Army List of Sept. 1891, the Director-General for the first time is shown with a rank, viz. that of Surgeon-Major-General. A Royal Warrant of 24 March 1902 (issued as a special Army order on 26 March 1902) ordered that the Director-General should rank as Lieutenant-General, and since that date all Gazette notifications of the appointment of Director-General run "to be Director-General and to rank as Lieutenant-General".

It may be noted here that in addition to the Director-General the Surgeon-General holding the appointment of Director of Medical Services, India, now ranks as Lieutenant-General whilst holding that appointment. The first to obtain this rank is Surgeon-General T. J. O'Donnell, C.B., D.S.O., who is shown in the Army List as ranking as "Lieutenant-General whilst employed as D.M.S. India, 21 Sept. 1916".

The Establishment at Headquarters of the Army Medical Department.—A few particulars of interest may be dealt with under this heading. In the days before the formation of a Medical Board no Office Establishment appears to have been provided for the Surgeon-General or Physician-General. While the Army Medical Board existed, £100 a year was allowed the Inspector of Regimental Hospitals to cover the office expenses of the Board, such as rent, salaries of clerks, postage and cost of stationery. In 1799, the year after the Board was abolished, the Office Establishment was fixed at one first clerk, who was also acting secretary, and two junior clerks. The total expense of the office for clerks and contingencies came to £556 6s.[1]

By 1806 the Office Establishment had increased to one assistant to the Surgeon-General, and another to the Inspector-General (who were Deputy Inspectors on full pay), one extra assistant to the Surgeon-General (with pay as Purveyor), one secretary and chief clerk, a clerk to the Surgeon-General, an accountant, and five junior clerks. The annual expense of the office was now £2423 3s. 3¾d.[2]

In the same year the three assistants were promoted to the rank of Inspector. The office at this time (1808) was in Upper Brook Street; before this it had been at 4 Berkeley Street, Piccadilly (1803). The Headquarters of the Army Medical Department and the other "Civil Departments" of the Army were not included in the War Office.[3] Sir William Babtie, V.C., K.C.M.G., C.B., made some inquiries as to the date the Army Medical Department became a part of the War Office, and found that it took place at the period the Duke of Newcastle was appointed fourth Secretary of State to undertake the whole business of the War Department. In some records of "Office Establishments and Memoranda, Chief Clerk, War Office," in the War Office Library, he found shown under "Secretary of State's Office," the office of the Director-General, Army Medical Department, appearing in conjunction with the Chaplain-General, Inspector-General of Fortifications, Director-Generals of Artillery, Director-General of Stores, Director-General of Contracts, Director-General of the Commissariat, Pensioner Branch, Solicitors' Department, Accountant-General, and First Clerk's Branch No purely military branches are included. The A.M.D. shows the Director-General. The Office of the Director-General is shown to consist of himself with 12 clerks, 7 temporary clerks, and 3 messengers. These lists are dated 31 March 1856. The new arrangements apparently began from 1 April 1856.

Three years later we find the Medical Department of the War Office divided into three branches, each under a separate head, namely, Medical, Sanitary, and Statistical. The Statistical branch was amalgamated with the Sanitary branch in 1880. In 1888 the division into Medical and Sanitary and Statistical branches disappeared, and the Director-General was now given a Professional Assistant with some juniors to help him.

In 1899 the Director-General had appointed under him a Deputy Director-General, an Assistant Director, and two Deputy Assistant Directors [L.G., 10 Jan. 1899]. In the early part of 1902 further changes of designation took place, and we find the appointments were Deputy Director-

[1] Fifth Report Mil. Inquiry, 1808. [2] Ibid. [3] Ibid.

General, Assistant Director-General, and Deputy Assistant Director-General [Special A.O., 26 Mar. 1902. Q.A.L., July 1902]. After 1 April 1903 an extra Deputy Assistant Director-General was appointed, and, later, a further increase became necessary. There are now five Deputy Assistant Directors-General.

The Further Evolution of the Army Medical Service.—We have now described how the Ordnance Medical Department became absorbed in the Army Medical Department in 1855, and how the Regimental Medical System disappeared in 1873. It remains to trace the further development of the Unified Army Medical Department.

Under the provisions of the Royal Warrant of 1 March 1873 the Inspectors-General of Hospitals and Deputy Inspectors-General became respectively Surgeons-General and Deputy Surgeons-General. Surgeons then serving (or on half pay if called upon to serve) became Surgeons-Major and Assistant-Surgeons, similarly circumstanced, became Surgeons. The ranks of the Officers of the Army Medical Department therefore became four in number, viz. Surgeon-General, Deputy Surgeon-General, Surgeon-Major, and Surgeon. The relative ranks of these officers were laid down by this warrant as follows: A Surgeon-General ranked as a Brigadier-General according to the date of his Commission, but if appointed to an Army in the field or after three years' full-pay service in the grade, he ranked as a Major-General from the date of his joining the Army in the field or completing three years' service as Surgeon-General. A Deputy Surgeon-General ranked as a Lieutenant-Colonel, but on completion of five years' full-pay service as a Deputy Surgeon General he ranked as a Colonel. A Surgeon-Major had the relative rank of a Major until he attained twenty years' full-pay service as Surgeon and Surgeon-Major, when he ranked as a Lieutenant-Colonel. A Surgeon's relative rank was that of Lieutenant, and after six years' full-pay service he ranked as a Captain.

These relative ranks regulated the choice of quarters, rates of lodging money, servants, fuel and light, detention and prize money, allowances granted on account of wounds or injuries received in action, and pensions and allowances to widows and families.

It was further enjoined that promotion to the rank of Surgeon-Major was to be by seniority, but a Surgeon was also required to pass an examination before promotion. Promotion to the higher ranks was to be by selection for ability and merit. Surgeons might be promoted to Surgeon-Major for distinguished conduct in the field without reference to seniority. Officers retiring after twenty-five years' service on full pay were granted a step of honorary rank, but without increase of half pay

Under this warrant officers of the Army Medical Department became eligible for good service pensions, and six of the most meritorious officers named Honorary Surgeons and six Honorary Physicians to the Queen.

Medical Officers were given the right to retire on completion of twenty years' service, and it was laid down, for the first time, that Medical Officers should be placed on the retired list on account of age, Surgeons and Surgeons-Major at the age of fifty-five, Deputy Surgeon-Generals and Surgeon-Generals at the age of sixty-five, except when for the good of the service retention of an officer beyond these ages was desirable as a special case. Officers on the half-pay list might also be employed in special situations at daily rates of pay in addition to half pay, but not after attaining the age of sixty-five.

Some special rules were laid down for service on the West Coast of Africa. Such service was to be voluntary, each year or part of a year so served on the Coast was to count double towards retirement, provided the officer served at least a year there. Double pay was given during service on the West Coast of Africa. Officers furthermore were allowed to enter the Army Medical Department for service on the West Coast of Africa at a later age than ordinary candidates, and, after completing three years' actual service there, or becoming unfit for further duty there, became eligible for general service.

A Royal Warrant—Army Medical Department—28 April 1876, altered the relative ranks of Surgeons-General and Deputy Surgeons-General: after this date the former ranked as Major-Generals and the latter as Colonels, according to the dates of their Commissions.

Surgeons under this warrant received Commissions for a limited period of ten years on full pay. After ten years' service he had to be specially selected for further employment. If unwilling to continue to serve, or if his services were dispensed with, after ten years' service he received a gratuity of £1000 in lieu of all pension.

Article 15 of this warrant ran: "Every year it shall be competent for our Commander-in-Chief on the recommendation of the Director-General, Army Medical Department, to select with the approval of the Secretary of State a number of Surgeons, not exceeding six, who shall be retained in the service, and shall be promoted after twelve years' service on full pay to the rank of Surgeon-Major". A Surgeon became eligible for promotion to Surgeon-Major on completing twelve years' full-pay service if recommended by the Director-General. The retiring age of Surgeons-General and Deputy Surgeons-General was under this warrant lowered to sixty years, but those so retired were given an augmentation of their pensions to compensate for the change.

A Royal Warrant, dated 23 Sept. 1876, provided that when officers had been promoted Surgeon-Major for distinguished conduct on the field, they should have the relative rank of Lieutenant-Colonel before completing twenty years' full-pay service "whenever it shall happen that the junior officer next to them shall have acquired the relative rank aforesaid".

The next changes in the Army Medical Department were brought about by the Royal Warrant of 27 Nov. 1879. The officers of the department were now divided into two classes: Class A, those who had joined the Department before 28 April 1876, those joining after the date of this warrant of 27 Nov. 1879, and those of Class B permitted to change their terms of service for those of Class A. Class B consisted of those officers who had joined the Army between the dates of the two warrants, 28 April 1876 and 27 Nov. 1879, and who had not transferred to Class A. Transfer was allowed within two years of the date of the warrant of 1879. The differences between the two classes were that Surgeons-General and Deputy Surgeons-General of Class A received one rate of pay irrespective of length of service, while those of Class B had rates of pay varying with their length of service. Class A rates were higher than Class B rates. In Class B the terms of limited service and selection for retention in the service continued. These rules did not apply to Class A. This warrant of 27 Nov. 1879 introduced a new rank into the Army Medical Department, that of Brigade Surgeon. He was selected for ability and merit from Surgeons-Major who had served abroad at least eight years as Surgeon and Surgeon-Major. The Brigade Surgeon was an executive officer though available for administrative charge. He was given the relative rank of Lieutenant-Colonel.

It was required by this warrant that no officer should be promoted Deputy Surgeon-General unless he had served ten years abroad, including three years in India.

An Army Medical Officer appointed Honorary Physician or Honorary Surgeon to the Queen if below the rank of Deputy Surgeon-General was to be promoted to that rank but to remain supernumerary of his rank until he would have obtained that rank in the ordinary course.

By this warrant candidates for Medical Commissions were appointed at least one half by competitive examination, the remainder from such qualified candidates "as may be proposed by the governing bodies of Public Schools of Medicine in the United Kingdom or in our Colonies . . . and shall be approved by the Director-General". These young officers, formerly called Medical Candidates while undergoing preliminary instruction in Ambulance and Hospital Corps duties and at the Army Medical School, were now termed Surgeons on Probation. Their Commissions as Surgeons dated from the last day of the competitive examination, or if nominated from the date of becoming a Surgeon on Probation.

By the Royal Warrant, Pay, etc., of Army Hospital Corps, 1 March 1873, the A.H.C. was for purposes of discipline made "subject to the orders of the local military authority, but in all other respects it shall be under the direction and control of the principal Medical Officer of the station". The officers and non-commissioned officers of the A.H.C. were given "authority to command the men of their own Corps, patients in military hospitals, and others below the rank of officer attached thereto for duty".

A *Royal Warrant—Army Hospital Corps—*14 Aug. 1877, vested the Director-General, A.M.D., with the administrative charge of the A.H.C., and the officers of the A.M.D. were granted authority to command the Medical Officers, and the officers, the non-commissioned officers and the privates of the A.H.C., all patients in military hospitals and such non-commissioned officers and privates as might be attached thereto for duty. By this warrant an officer A.H.C. became Staff Officer for the Corps at Headquarters.

A Royal Warrant, dated 5 Feb. 1881, gave Brigade Surgeons precedence over Surgeons-Major holding the same relative rank of Lieutenant-Colonel.

The next change in the Army Medical Department was brought about by the Royal Warrant of 20 Sept. 1884. By this the Medical Officers and Quartermasters of the Army Medical Department were designated the "Medical Staff" and the Warrant Officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Army Hospital Corps became the "Medical Staff Corps". This warrant directed that the Royal Warrant (for Pay and Promotion), dated 10 June 1884, should be amended and certain Articles added. One of the new Articles (307*a*) was as follows:—

"The Officers of the Medical Staff shall be the Officers of, and shall command the Medical Staff Corps, as well as all patients in military hospitals, and such Officers, non-commissioned officers, and men as may be attached for duty to the Medical Staff Corps; but they shall not hold any military command outside the corps." It was also laid down that "an Officer of the Medical Staff selected by the Director General and approved by our Commander-in-Chief, shall be appointed Staff Officer of the Medical Staff Corps".

On 13 March 1886, the Volunteer Medical Staff Corps was established by Royal Warrant. Relative rank was last shown in the Royal Warrant for Pay and Promotion, dated 10 June 1884. Relative rank was abolished by the Royal Warrant of 31 Dec. 1886. Honorary rank was recognised but not relative rank. One of its articles ran: "Officers of Departments of our Army not having honorary rank shall rank for purposes of precedence, pensions for wounds, pensions to widows, and compassionate allowances to orphans," with ranks corresponding to their former relative ranks. In the Pay Warrant of 15 Nov. 1887, Article 268 was as follows:—

"An Officer of a Department of our Army not having Honorary rank shall rank as follows for purposes of precedence and other advantages attaching to corresponding military rank; but this shall not entitle him to military command of any kind, to the Presidency of Courts Martial, Courts of Inquiry, Committees, or Boards of Survey." Medical Officers now "ranked as" Major-General, etc., as in their former relative ranks. It will be noted from this Article that the Medical Officer did not possess relative rank, honorary rank, nor military rank but only an ill-defined status giving him "advantages attaching to corresponding military rank". The medical officers of the Army naturally became dissatisfied with their position. They had other disabilities as regards pay in India, excessive amount of Indian and Colonial service, and want of recognition of their services by Honours and Rewards. Another Department had been formed into a Corps, the Army Service Corps, and its officers given full military rank. Tours of foreign service had been extended by one year, so that Medical Officers were now required to serve in India six years at a stretch and four years in unhealthy Colonial Stations. The Establishment of Medical Officers had been reduced, and more retired pay officers employed, thus reducing the number of Medical Officers at home and shortening their period of home service.

The "grievances" of the Medical Officers were taken up by the Medical and Lay Press, the British Medical Journal being particularly prominent.[1]

The terms under which officers joined the Army Medical Department for a limited period of service, then retiring with a gratuity, had not proved attractive to the profession, and the numbers competing at the entrance examinations were dwindling. For over two years after 27 July 1887, there were no entries into the Department. At last Parliament appointed in Jan. 1889, a Committee, under the Presidency of the Earl of Camperdown, to inquire into the pay, status, and conditions of service of Medical Officers of the Army. The Committee issued its report on 31 July following.

Mr. Secretary Stanhope did not, however, consent to lay the evidence taken by the Committee on the table of the House of Commons until March 1890, and even then he declined to publish it; but, soon after, he permitted the British Medical Association to do so in a volume which appeared in April 1890.

The Secretary of State, at the instigation of his military advisers, having decided to ignore all the more important recommendations of this Committee appointed by himself, Surgeon-Major William Johnston, commanding the Depôt, Medical Staff Corps, who, on 5 April 1889, had given evidence of the strongest character before Lord Camperdown's Committee, addressed a letter on 23 May 1890, to the President of the Royal College of Physicians of London, inviting attention to the great dissatisfaction caused by Mr. Stanhope's action, and urging the necessity for the formation of the Army Medical Service into a Corps, with definite military rank. This letter was printed by the College and a copy sent to each of the Fellows.[2]

At an extraordinary comitia of the College held on 18 June 1890, the President, Sir Andrew Clark, Bart., in the chair, Surgeon-Major Johnston's letter was taken as read, and a resolution was then moved by Dr. Robert Farquharson, M.P., seconded by Sir Dyce Duckworth, and agreed to, that the College should, in conjunction with other licensing bodies, send a deputation to the Secretary of State for War, pointing out the grievances and urging the claims of the Army Medical Department.

The deputation from the Medical Corporations which was the outcome of the resolution passed by the Royal College of Physicians, waited on the Secretary of State on 21 July 1890. The deputation included the President of the Royal College of Physicians of London, the President of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, the President of the Royal College of Physicians of Edinburgh, the President of the King and Queen's College of Physicians, Ireland, and the President of the Royal College of Surgeons of Ireland, while the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh, and the Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons of Glasgow were also represented, though not by their Presidents. Sir Andrew Clark, as leader of the deputation, most ably advocated the claims of the Army Medical Staff, but Mr. Stanhope's reply was not encouraging. Sir Andrew Clark subsequently had several conferences and some correspondence with the War Secretary. Finally a Royal Warrant was signed by the Queen on 7 Aug. 1891, and issued as a Special Army Order on 10 Aug. 1891 (Army Order 187 of 1891).

This warrant stated that "the substantive ranks of the Officers of Our Medical Staff shall be as follows. These ranks shall carry precedence and other advantages attaching to the rank indicated by the military portion of the title, but shall not [with certain exceptions] entitle the Officer to military command, or to the Presidency of Courts Martial, Courts of Inquiry, Committees, or Boards of Survey:—

Surgeon-Major-General.
Surgeon-Colonel.
Brigade Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel.
Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel.
Surgeon-Major.
Surgeon-Captain.
Surgeon-Lieutenant.

The Director-General of the Army Medical Department shall hold the substantive rank of Surgeon-Major-General."

This warrant also allowed Medical Officers sick leave of absence on full pay on the same conditions as those laid down for regimental officers. By a notification in the London Gazette, dated, War Office, 28 Aug. 1891, the designations of the Departmental Rank of the Officers of the Medical Staff "now serving" were altered, as follows:—

Surgeons-General, ranking as Major-Generals, to be Surgeons-Major-General.

Deputy Surgeons-General, ranking as Colonels, to be Surgeons-Colonel.

Brigade Surgeons, ranking as Lieutenant-Colonels, to be Brigade Surgeons-Lieutenant-Colonel.

Surgeons-Major, ranking as Lieutenant-Colonel, to be Surgeons-Lieutenant-Colonel.

Surgeons-Major, ranking as Major, to be Surgeons-Major.

Surgeons, ranking as Captains, to be Surgeon-Captains.

On 4 Dec. of the same year similar changes were made in the designation of the Medical Officers serving in the Honourable Artillery Company of London, the Militia, the Yeomanry, and Volunteers with effect from 1 Dec. 1891. A Royal Warrant was issued for the Indian Medical Service on 15 Dec. 1891, giving them the same substantive ranks as Army Medical Officers of the British service.

On 17 Oct. 1893 it was notified in the London Gazette that the designation of the substantive rank of officers "on the Retired List liable to be recalled to service" (that is under 55 years of age on 17 Oct. 1893), should be altered to agree with those of officers on the Active List. The "Compound titles" so created which were as stepping-stones to definite military rank and titles, remained in vogue only until 23 June 1898, when Her Majesty was graciously pleased to sign another warrant, which runs as follows:—

Victoria R.I.

"Whereas We have deemed it expedient to alter in certain respects the conditions under which the officers employed upon the medical duties of Our Army are at present serving;

"Our will and pleasure is that officers below the rank of Surgeon-major-general serving in Our Army Medical Staff shall be formed into a corps, together with the warrant officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of Our Medical Staff Corps;

"It is Our further will and pleasure that the designation 'Medical Staff Corps' shall be abolished and that the corps formed as above-mentioned shall be styled 'The Royal Army Medical Corps'.

"The following alterations will consequently be made in the ranks of the medical officers of Our Army:

Present Ranks.	New Ranks.
Surgeon-Colonel	Colonel.
Brigade Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel	Lieutenant-Colonel.
Surgeon-Major	Major.
Surgeon-Captain	Captain.
Surgeon-Lieutenant	Lieutenant.

"The medical staff of Our Army shall in future consist of Surgeon-generals (ranking as Major-generals), and the title of Surgeon-major-generals now serving shall be altered accordingly.

"Officers of Our Royal Army Medical Corps holding appointments in Our household troops shall be borne as seconded officers on the establishment of Our Royal Army Medical Corps, etc.

"Given at Our Court at Windsor, this 23rd day of June, 1898, in the 62nd year of Our Reign.

"By Her Majesty's Command,
"LANSDOWNE."

By Gazette notification on 19 July 1898 the ranks of Medical Officers serving on 23 June 1898 were altered accordingly. On 9 Aug. 1898 the designations of the substantive rank of officers on the Retired List liable to be recalled to service, that is under 55 years of age, and also of those retired officers who, though not liable on account of age to be recalled under the provisions of Article 486*c*, Royal Warrant, 26 April 1897, have been, or shall be in military employment on or after 23 June 1898, were also changed to the new titles.

The ranks of the Indian Medical Service were altered to correspond with those of the Royal Army Medical Corps by a Royal Warrant dated 26 Aug. 1898.

On 1 Feb. 1902 the Militia and Volunteer Medical Staff Corps became Militia and Volunteer Royal Army Medical Corps, and their officers were granted rank.

A Royal Warrant signed by His late Majesty the King, 24 March 1902, and issued as a Special Army Order, 26 March 1902, which very materially improved the pay and conditions of service of the officers of the Royal Army Medical Corps, ordered that the Surgeon-General holding the appointment of Director-General, Army Medical Service, should rank as Lieutenant-General.

Position of Surgeon-Generals under Royal Warrants of 23 June 1898 and 9 Jan. 1907.—By the Royal Warrant of 23 June 1898, it was laid down that the Army Medical Staff shall in future consist of Surgeon-Generals, the officers below that rank becoming the officers of the Royal Army Medical Corps.

Under the Royal Warrant of 9 June 1907, "Army Medical Staff" ceased to exist, and the Surgeon-Generals were held as "Removed from the Royal Army Medical Corps" as in the case of General Officers of the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers.

Position of Colonels under Royal Warrant of 9 Jan. 1907.—By the Royal Warrant of 9 Jan. 1907, the Colonels who previously had been considered Officers of the Royal Army Medical Corps were removed from the Corps and placed on the same footing as Surgeon-Generals.

The Evolution of the Royal Army Medical Corps irrespective of the Medical Officers.—The idea of a Medical Corps consisting of officers and rank and file for duty in hospitals and in ambulance duties in the field was not a new one. We have seen that William III. had a body of men and nurses which carried out these duties in his Marching and General Hospitals. All through our history from that time attendants were employed in our hospitals. In 1811 Dr. Frank proposed to the Army Medical Board, without success, the formation of a Hospital Corps.

Already in the West Indies a Hospital Corps, with an Adjutant (see appointment of James Thornton, gent., to be Adjutant, 10 Sept. 1796) was in existence. This was shown as the Royal Hospital Corps in 1798 (when Thornton became Quartermaster). In 1819 Surgeon J. G. van Millingen, M.D., published The Army Medical Officer's Manual in which he suggested a Hospital Corps, and described its duties on the battle-field with ambulances. No steps were taken, however, in this matter until the outbreak of the Crimean War, when a Hospital Conveyance Corps was originated. This corps was recruited from military pensioners and other non-effectives. Their duties were to act as stretcher-bearers in the field, to act as attendants in the hospitals, to take charge of transport, and to supply medical staff officers with servants. The corps was an utter failure owing to the want of training of the men, their want of activity from age and infirmity, and their general drunken and disorderly habits. There was also no system of command or discipline. The Land Transport Corps for a time carried out the transport of the sick and wounded after they had been removed from the field.

At last, by Royal Warrant, 11 June 1855, the first Medical Staff Corps was organised. It consisted of nine companies, each 78 in strength, and it was to be employed in any way that may be required in the performance of hospital duties. There were no officers except one, quartered at the Depôt, for the general management of the corps. In hospitals they were under the Principal Medical Officer and the Purveyor. The non-commissioned officers had no military titles, but "ranked as" different grades of non-commissioned officers but bore no badges of rank. They consisted of Stewards, Wardmasters, Assistant Stewards, Cooks, Assistant Wardmasters, and Orderlies. In Sept. 1855 a further warrant increased the strength of the corps to ten companies, each 120 strong. All members of the corps could be discharged at any time with pensions according to length of service. It is scarcely necessary to say that a corps such as this, with practically no military feature in its organisation, was soon found to be useless, and on 1 Aug. 1857 a Royal Warrant appeared, by the provisions of which "a new corps of attendants at Military Hospitals shall be forthwith raised . . . which shall be called The Army Hospital Corps". The ranks of the new corps were Sergeant-Major, Company Sergeant, Sergeant, and Private. The non-commissioned officers took rank with those of other corps in the Army and wore the usual distinctions on their uniforms. An officer or officers were appointed for the general management of the corps, to be stationed at the Depôt, and perform the duties of Adjutant, Paymaster, and Quartermaster. Detachments were under the general superintendence and control of the Principal Medical Officer of each station, or of the Senior Medical Officer of each regiment. In a General Hospital the Purveyor acted as Paymaster and Quartermaster, in Regimental Hospitals the men were attached to a company of the regiment. By Royal Warrant, dated 1 March 1873, the Army Hospital Corps was re-organised "for extended duties in connection with the Hospital Service of the Army". The corps was made subject to the orders of the local military authority in matters of discipline, but in all other respects was under the control and direction of the Principal Medical Officer at a station. Officers appointed to the corps were ranked as Captains of Orderlies and Lieutenants of Orderlies, their relative ranks corresponded with their titles, and they were given authority to command not only the men of their own corps but also patients in Military Hospitals and non-commissioned officers and men attached thereto. The ranks of these officers were filled from former Captains of Orderlies and Apothecaries of the Forces, who volunteered for service in the corps, and, later, by promotion from the ranks of the corps. A Staff Officer was selected for the corps, to preserve its records, and perform such quartermaster's duties as might be necessary at head-quarters. The ranks of the Army Hospital Corps were recruited by volunteers from regiments, who were required to be of good character, able to read and write, and recommended as suitable by their Commanding Officer. They were required to serve on probation for six months before final transfer into the corps. On 14 Aug. 1877, another Royal Warrant improved the Army Hospital Corps. The Director-General of the Army Medical Department was now vested with the administrative charge of the corps, and the Medical Officers obtained, subject to the local military Commanding Officer, authority to command the Medical Officers and the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Army Hospital Corps, the patients in Military Hospitals and others attached thereto. The P.M.O. of the district, subject to the General Commanding the district, was given supreme authority in matters of discipline affecting his department, including the Army Hospital Corps. The Officers of Orderlies still retained their powers of command, but under the Medical Officers, and they now took over the duties formerly performed by the Purveyors.

The Royal Warrant for Pay and Promotion, dated 25 June 1881—with effect from 1 July 1881—altered the designation of the Officers of Orderlies of the Army Hospital Corps to Hospital Quartermaster Army Hospital Corps [A.C. Cl. 147 of 1881]. This was amended by the Royal Warrant for Pay and Promotion of 22 Feb. 1882, Hospital Quartermasters now becoming Quartermasters Army Hospital Corps [A.C. Cl. 37 of 1882].

A Royal Warrant, issued on 20 Sept. 1884, with effect from 1 Aug. 1884, directed that the Medical Officers and Quartermasters of the Army Medical Department should be designated the Medical Staff, and that the Warrant Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and men of the Army Hospital Corps should be designated the Medical Staff Corps. The Medical Staff Corps was placed under the command of the Officers of the Medical Staff, and an Officer of the Medical Staff appointed Staff Officer of the Corps.

A Militia Medical Staff Corps was formed on 8 March 1891.

By Royal Warrant, dated 23 June 1898,[1] all officers of the Army Medical Staff below the rank of Surgeon-General and the Warrant Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and men of the Medical Staff Corps were united to form the Royal Army Medical Corps.

Retired Officers. Step of Honorary Rank on Retirement.—By Art. 24 of the Royal Warrant of 1 Oct. 1858, it was laid down that a Medical Officer retiring on half pay after a full-pay service of twenty-five years and upwards, might, if recommended for the same by the Head of his Department, receive a step of honorary rank, but without any consequent increase of half pay.

This regulation remained in force until, by Art. 124 of the Royal Warrant for Pay and Promotion of 25 June 1881, which took effect from 1 July 1881, it was laid down that a step of honorary rank might be granted to any officer of the Army, on retiring on retired pay, provided he had completed twenty years' full pay.[2]

If the retirement is voluntary, it is gazetted "retires on retired pay": if it is compulsory, the officer is said to be "placed on retired pay".

The fashion of granting a step of honorary rank to an officer on retirement came to an end on the publication of the Royal Warrant for Pay and Promotion of 15 Nov. 1887. Under Art. 266—I of this warrant as amended by Army Order 124 of 1888, no Medical Officer who had not applied to retire before 1 Jan. 1888 was eligible for a step of honorary rank, and Art. 116—II contains a similar rule in the case of other officers.

Until 30 June 1881 officers who retired are shown as "ret. on h.p." On and after 1 July 1881 they are shown as "r.p." or "ret. with gratuity".

Retired Medical Officers, Liable to be Recalled to Service.—A Medical Officer, who voluntarily retires before the age of 55 is liable to be called upon to serve in a case of national emergency, until he reaches the age of 55, under Art. 23, R.W. of 27 Nov. 1879 (A.C. Cl. I of 1880), embodied in the Pay Warrant of 25 June 1851 as Art. 315.

List of "Medical Officers retired under Art. 23 of the Royal Warrant of 27 Nov. 1870" is given at p. 1022, Q.A.L. July 1880, and M.A.L. July 1880, p. 589 a & b.

By Jan. 1885, at least, the heading of this list was altered in Q.A.L. to "Medical Officers on the retired list eligible for temporary employment". By Jan. 1891, at least, the heading was again altered to "Medical Officers on the retired list liable to be recalled to service (the names of

[1] See p. lix.

[2] It was under this warrant that age limits for promotion and retirement were made stringent, and the granting of a step of honorary rank practically to all officers on retirement was intended as a sort of consolation to those, who, in consequence of the new regulations failed to attain the rank to which they had aspired. It was also under this warrant that the distinction was made between "half pay" and "retired pay". Previously, with the exception of those officers who were eligible to retire on "full pay," all retirements were on "half pay". Now, half pay was limited to officers on the Active List, and an officer when removed to the Non-offective List was retired on "retired pay".

Officers liable to recall, who have retired since the R.W. of 23 June 1898, are shown in the 'Reserve of Officers')."

In Q.A.L. Jan. 1903, pp. 1733-35, the heading is "Officers of the Army Medical Service who retired previous to the Royal Warrant of 23 June 1898 who are liable to be recalled to service".

In Q.A.L. July 1903 these officers are shown under "Reserve of Officers," p. 1817, until July 1908 at least, when "Reserve of Officers" is no longer inserted in Q.A.L., but it is to be found once a quarter in the monthly Army Lists since April 1904 at any rate.

1891-1893. Compound Titles to Retired Officers who were born after 17 Oct. 1838.

Under notification in London Gazette of 17 Oct. 1893, following the Royal Warrant of 7 Aug. 1891, all Officers under the rank of D.S.G., on the Retired List, who at the date of this notification were liable to be recalled to service, that is to say, who were then under 55 years of age, were given compound titles in lieu of their former designations of departmental substantive rank.

There was no provision for the alteration of the designation of the honorary departmental rank granted to officers who retired before 1888.

The formula for expressing this in the ROLL is (insert after retirement):—

1898. Grant of Military Titles to Retired Officers (a) who were born after 23 June 1843, or (b) who were in military employment on or after 23 June 1898.

Under notification in the London Gazette, dated 9 Aug. 1898, following the Royal Warrant of 23 June 1898, officers under the rank of Surgeon-Colonel, on the Retired List, who at the date of this warrant were liable to be recalled to service (that is to say, who were then under 55 years of age) were given military titles in lieu of their substantive departmental designations.

Retired Officers, though on account of age not liable to be recalled, who were in military employment on or after 23 June 1898, were similarly treated.

There was no provision for the alteration of the designation of the honorary departmental rank granted to officers who retired before 1888.

The formula for expressing this in the ROLL is (insert after retirement):—

SOURCES OF INFORMATION.

It is evident that if a separate reference had been given for every statement, entry, date, etc., in this Roll, the book would have become unwieldy and unreadable.

The Editor has therefore thought it better to give a list of the sources from which he knows Colonel Johnston derived the information given in the Roll.

He had access to, and made use of, the following War Office Records :—

Returns of Services of Surgeons serving in 1820—8 vols.
Half-pay Books, 1840—2 vols.
Medical Officers Services from the end of the eighteenth century to 1900—giving full services of officers from first commission to retirement—20 vols.
Statement of Services of Medical Officers serving in 1843—giving full services from first commission to retirement—4 vols.
Schedules of Qualifications of Candidates for Medical Commissions, March 1825 to Dec. 1861—21 vols.

Inasmuch as the Office of the Secretary of State for the War Department was not established until 1794, much information relating to Medical Officers anterior to that date has been taken from documents among the State Papers, Domestic ; State Papers, Foreign ; the Home Office Papers, and the Foreign Office Papers. These were consulted at the Public Record Office.

The chief records consulted at the Public Record Office include the following :—

War Office Letters, W.O./4, 401-409. From these a good deal of information as to medical personnel has been derived, including information as to the appointments, transfers, and promotions of Hospital Mates, and other Medical Officers.
War Office Letters, W.O. 7/96-109. Letters from Adair and Hunter to the Medical Board.
W.O. 25. Commission Books, 1660 to 1803—50 vols.
Notification Books, 1708 to 1811—53 vols.
Medical Succession Books—7 vols.
Description and Succession Books (Returns of Officers Services).
Casualty Returns, Medical Registers, 1811-1852.
W.O. 26. Entry Books of Warrants and Precedents—18 vols.
W.O. 28 10. Miscellaneous Returns (America).
W.O. 30/83-84. Medical Reports, 1799-1803.
W.O. 30/38. Register of Warrants, 1800-1806.
W.O. 30/41. Register of Warrants, 1819-1829.

P.M.G./4. Paymaster General's Records—231 vols.
Half Pay and Retired Pay—1837-1879.
[Casualties which have occurred amongst officers on the Retired List (omitted from Army Lists) after the financial year 1878-1879 were kindly furnished by the Assistant Paymaster-General.]
P.R.O. Lists of Rewards on Retired Pay, 1813-1880—70 vols.
W.O. 64. Army Lists in Manuscript from 1702.

In addition to the above, information has been obtained from the London Gazette, from the Annual Army Lists, 1764-1879, and from the Quarterly and Monthly Army Lists from 1879 to date.

The late Surgeon-General A. Gore's Story of our Services under the Crown has been useful, but is not always a trustworthy authority. Munk's Roll of the Royal College of Physicians, London, is a mine of information, but in some cases it omits to say that those named had served in the Army. Finally, the Dictionary of National Biography has been of great service. Other references are given in the text.

aftds. S.M.G.	Used in the case of a Surgeon-General whose designation was changed to Surgeon-Major-General, without alteration in the date of his commission, under the provisions of Royal Warrant of 7 Aug. 1891.
aftds. S.M. Staff	Used in the case of a Staff Surgeon of the First Class whose designation was changed to Staff Surgeon-Major, without alteration in the date of his commission, under the provisions of the Royal Warrant of 1 Oct. 1858.
aftds. S. Staff	Used in the case of a Staff Surgeon of the Second Class whose designation became Staff Surgeon when, under Royal Warrant of 1 October 1858, the Staff Surgeons of the First Class became Surgeons-Major and in consequence there was only one grade of Staff Surgeon.
aftds. S. Staff 1 Class	Used in the case of a Staff Surgeon whose designation was changed to Staff Surgeon of the First Class, without alteration in the date of his commission, under the provisions of the Royal Warrant of 14 Oct. 1840, when a Second Class of Staff Surgeons, who corresponded in rank with Regimental Surgeons, was instituted.
A.H.C.	Army Hospital Corps.
A.I.H.	Assistant Inspector of Hospitals. (This grade discontinued under R.W. 22 May 1804: reintroduced R.W. 29 July 1830, again dispensed with by R.W. 14 Oct. 1840.)
A.L.	Army List. (When not otherwise indicated the Annual Official Army List is referred to.)
A.M.D.	Army Medical Department. Used to mark the unification, on 1 Mar. 1873 of all Staff and Regimental Officers under the designation of the Army Medical Department. All Medical Officers now ceased to be regimental Officers with the exception of those belonging to the Household Troops who continued in their regiments, although included also in the Departmental list. At that date the designation of every Officer then serving on full pay, excepting that of Surgeon-Major, was changed without alteration in the date of his commission: but Surgeons-Major were now divided into two denominations, one having the relative rank of Lieutenant-Colonel and the other that of Major. Staff and regimental Surgeons-Major became Surgeons-Major A.M.D., and as before ranked with Lieutenant-Colonels, but junior of that rank. All officers in the ROLL whose dates of appointment to be Surgeons-Major A.M.D. are shown to coincide with the dates of their first commissions as Surgeons, ranked as Majors. These on completion of twenty years' full pay service ranked as Lieutenant-Colonels without any Gazette notification, except in the few cases where this promotion was given for distinguished service before the completion of the qualifying period of service. It is to be understood that all officers serving on full pay belonged to the Army Medical Department, from 1 March 1873, until 20 Sept. 1884 when the designation of the department was changed to Medical Staff (see below).

A.M.S.	Army Medical Staff. By Royal Warrant of 20 Sept. 1884, the designation of the Army Medical Department was changed to Medical Staff, and the Quartermasters of the Army Hospital Corps (the Warrant Officers, non-Commissioned Officers and men of which by the same Warrant became the Medical Staff Corps) were now included as Officers of the Medical Staff. It is to be understood, although not noted in the ROLL, that from the date of this warrant the proper designation of the Department, so far as Officers on full pay were concerned, became Medical Staff.

McGrigor was Superintending S. of the troops sent from India, under Sir David Baird, to Egypt in 1801, and held a Commission from H.E.I.C. so as to regularize his position over the medical officers of the H.E.I.C.S. He was the first to hold such an appointment. On 10 Jan. 1812 he joined the Staff of Wellington's Army in the Peninsula as Principal Medical Officer, and was present throughout the subsequent campaigns from Ciudad Rodrigo to Toulouse. His administrative ability, courage, and self-reliance soon gained him Wellington's confidence. The great efficiency of the medical department of the Peninsula Army under his direction is well shown by Napier, who states that in ten months after the retreat from Burgos 95,348 sick and wounded passed through the hospitals, and yet before Vittoria the sick list was under 5000, and after Vittoria, without reinforcements from England, the Army mustered within 30 men as strong as before, the ranks having been recruited by convalescents. At the end of the war Wellington declared his satisfaction with McGrigor and the department under his direction, and stated, "He is one of the most industrious, able, and successful public servants I have ever met with" (Gurwood, vii. 643). After the war the medical officers who had served under him presented him with a service of plate valued at a thousand guineas. His tenure of the office of Director-General was associated with great benefit to the Army Medical Service as well as to the Army as a whole. He started the system of medical reports and returns from all military stations, which, later, formed the basis of The Statistical Returns of the Health of the Army. He founded the Museum of Natural History and Pathological Anatomy at Fort Pitt, Chatham, since removed to Netley, and now at the R.A.M. College, Millbank. He presented 1500 books to the Army Medical Officers' Library, now at the R.A.M. College. In 1816 he started The Army Medical Officers Friendly Society for the relief of widows of Army Medical Officers. When he retired it possessed a capital of nearly £80,000 and provided for 120 widows. It now flourishes as The Army Medical Officers Widows' and Orphans' Fund. He also founded The Army Medical Benevolent Fund, which assists the orphans of medical officers, and still exists. These funds are perhaps the most enduring of the monuments to the memory of this great Army Medical Officer. McGrigor was the author of: A Memoir on the Health of the 88th and other Regiments, Bombay, 1801; Medical Sketches of the Expedition to Egypt from India, London, 1804; A Letter to the Commissioners of Military Enquiry, London, 1865; A Memoir on the Health of the Army in the Peninsula, in Transactions of the Medico-Chirurgical Society, London, vol. vi.; Reports on Sickness, Mortality, and Invaliding in the Army, 1830 and 1838; and an Autobiography, 1861. His portrait by Sir David Wilkie is in the R.A.M. Mess at Millbank, and by Dyce in Maris. Coll. Abd. A statue, erected by his many friends and admirers, formerly at Chelsea, is now outside the R.A.M. College, Millbank. In Duthie Park, Abd., there also stands a stately granite obelisk to his memory. d. in London, 2 Apl. 1858. West Indies 1795. b. at Stonebyres, Lanarkshire, 1750. M.D., Leyden 1785. Practised in Jamaica, 1774-1778. Joined Fraser's Highlanders (78 F. aftds. 71 F.) in New York, as Volunteer in 1778. Regt. Mate, 71 F. May 1778, and Ensign, 71 F. 1 July 1783 : h.p. as Ensign, 1783. Gazetted S. to Buffs "from h.p. of Ensign 71 F." His promotion to Physician in 1795 was made by the C. in C. without the approval of the Army Medical Board, who had made rules regarding promotion which practically debarred a regimental surgeon from ever becoming a physician. Jackson accordingly became a marked man. When acting I.H. to the Cavalry in Germany in 1795 he had occasion to write to the Army Medical Board : his letters were ignored. Jackson's appointment as Phys. and Head of the Depôt Hospital in 1801 was also made by the C. in C. and not by the Medical Board. An epidemic breaking out at Parkhurst, I. of Wight, the Medical Board reported unfavourably on Jackson, but the C. in C. ordered an inquiry by a board of Medical Officers into Jackson's administration of the hospital, and he was triumphantly vindicated. Jackson, however, was not satisfied, and feeling that he could not, even officially, correspond with the Surgeon-General, he resigned, went on h.p., and returned to private practice at Stockton-on-Tees. In 1807 he was offered and accepted the post of Military Secretary to Major-General Simcoe who had been nominated C. in C., India. General Simcoe died before he could take up his appointment. Jackson's books pointing out abuses in the Army Medical Service increased the enmity of the Medical Board towards him, and his application for employment in Spain was refused owing to the objections put forward by the Physician-General and Surgeon-General. Soon after Jackson met the Surgeon-General in the street and applied his cane to his shoulders. Brought before a magistrate, charged with assault, Jackson made no defence, and was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the King's Bench Prison. The Walcheren fiasco brought about the abolition of the Army Medical Board, and, in 1811, Jackson was again employed as I.H. In 1819 Jackson went to Spain and Gibraltar to study Yellow Fever and to the Levant to study Plague. Jackson was a good classical scholar, was proficient in French, German, Spanish, and Italian, and had some knowledge of Gaelic, Arabic, and Persian. He was the author altogether of 23 books and pamphlets. The chief are : A Treatise on the Fevers of Jamaica, etc. 1791 ; reprinted Philadelphia, 1795 ; printed in German at Leipzig, 1796. Remarks on the Constitution of the Medical Department of the Army, etc. 1803. A Systematical View of the Formation, Discipline, and Economy of Armies, 1804. This was the first edition of his greatest work, a military classic. A second expanded, edition appeared in 1824, and a third edition, with a portrait and biography, was published, long after his death, in 1845. A Sketch of the History and Cure of Febrile Diseases, more particularly as they appear in the West Indies among the Soldiers of the British Army, 1817 : a second edition, 1820, also contains reports on military positions, barracks, and hospitals in the West Indies. d. at Thursby, near Carlisle, 6 Apl. 1827. In 1826 refused Knighthood. Hunterian Orator, 1830. H. Mate, 23 June 1800. Known as "the English Larrey," Guthrie was the greatest surgeon the Peninsular War produced, and no army surgeon save Wiseman did more to advance the science and practice of surgery. He started in 1816 a course of lectures on surgery, continued for 30 years, which was open free to all Army, Navy, and E.I. Co. medical officers as a right. He wrote numerous contributions to the literature of military, ophthalmic, and general surgery and anatomy, but his greatest work, a compendium of his former writings, appeared in 1853, with the title Commentaries on the Surgery of the War, 1808-1815. A sixth edition, containing comments on the Surgery of the Crimea, was published in 1855. Guthrie presented a copy to every regiment in the Service, to each Naval Station, and to the P.M.O. of each Indian Presidency. Guthrie attended the wounded in Brussels after Waterloo. d. in London, 1 May 1856. (D.N.B. Biographies : Lancet, 1850. J.R.A.M.C. vol. xiv. Guthrie's Commentaries, 1856.)

S., R.N. on board H.M.S. Bellerophon when it conveyed Napoleon to St. Helena. He became Surgeon to Napoleon. Having quarrelled with Sir Hudson Lowe, the Governor of St. Helena, he was sent home to England. He identified himself with Napoleon's interests in his quarrel with Lowe, and on his return to England was dismissed the Navy, 2 Nov. 1818, for having written a letter to the Admiralty insinuating that Napoleon's life was unsafe in Lowe's hands. He took a prominent part in politics, espousing the cause of Queen Caroline, and supported Daniel O'Connell. He wrote many pamphlets against Sir Hudson Lowe and a book Napoleon in Exile; or a Voice from St. Helena, which ran through five editions and gave rise to great controversy. O'Meara was proved to have overstated his case. b. 1786. He was the grandfather of Kathleen O'Meara, the Irish biographer and novelist. d. in London, 3 June 1836.

Mate, R.N., May 1803 to Jan. 1805. Hosp. Mate before joining 89 F. Marshall has been described as the "Father of Medical Statistics". Throughout his service he worked steadily at the medical statistics of the army, and their bearings on the improved efficiency of the soldier. His studies ranged from the statistics of diseases in the army, to the comparative health of different military stations and the effects of ill-usage, punishment, crime, etc., on the efficiency of the army and their cost. In 1835, with Sir. A. M. Tulloch, he investigated the statistics of the sickness, mortality, and invaliding of the British Army. Their report on the health of the troops in the West Indies, laid before Parliament in 1836, led to revolutionary reforms in the treatment of soldiers in the tropics. Marshall wrote voluminously on the subject of which he was such a master. His chief works are : Notes on the Medical Topography of the Interior of Ceylon, Lond. 1821 : Hints to Young Medical Officers on the Examining of Recruits and the Feigned Disabilities of Soldiers, Lond. 1828 : On the Enlisting, the Discharging, and the Pensioning of Soldiers, Lond. 1832 : Military Miscellany, Comprehending a History of the Recruiting of the Army. Lond. 1846 : Ceylon, a General Description and Historical Sketch, Lond. 1846 : Suggestions for the Advancement of Military Medical Literature, 1849. Edin. 1859. F.R.C.P. Lond. 1860. H. Mate, 15 Aug. 1815. Sir Andrew Smith was a distinguished naturalist, and, during his service in South Africa, 1820-1837, added greatly to our knowledge of the Zoology and Ethnography of S. Africa. In 1824 he was sent on a mission to the Kaffir tribes ; in 1828 he was sent to the Orange River region and reported on the Bushmen, afterwards publishing his Origin and History of the Bushmen, which was translated into French, German, and other languages. In 1830 he was sent on a dangerous mission into Natal and Zululand, and visited Dingaan. One result of his report was the formation of the Colony of Natal, and the position of Lieut.-Governor was offered him, which he declined. In 1834 he went on a fresh mission to the Kalahari and Matabeleland and explored the Limpopo River. He made large collections of natural history specimens during his explorations, including many new species. His written communications on this subject were twenty-one in number. He also wrote on Secondary Small-Pox, Remittent Fever, and Ophthalmology. d. 12 Aug. 1872. (D.N.B. Memoir of Sir Andrew Smith, by Alex. Michie. Alnwick, 1877.)

Q.H.S. 1859. b. 29 or 30 Apl. 1812. F.R.C.S. Edin. 1858. On the constitution of Mr. Sidney Herbert's Committee of Inquiry, after the Crimean War, he was appointed a Commissioner, and afterwards, as D.G., carried out the recommendations of the Commission. The Royal Warrant of 1 Oct. 1858, improved the pay and relative rank of Army Medical Officers, laid down definite rules for promotion, raised the qualifications for entry to the service, and enjoined that entry should be by competitive examination followed by a course of instruction in Military Medicine, Surgery, and Hygiene. The foundation of the Army Medical School, at Fort Pitt, followed. Military Hospitals were improved, and the Royal Victoria Hospital at Netley and the Herbert Hospital at Woolwich were built. A permanent roster for foreign service, open to inspection, was established, and the medical, statistical, and sanitary departments at the War Office placed on a better foundation. To perpetuate his memory a fund was raised by public subscription, the proceeds of which were invested, and The Alexander Memorial Prize, consisting of £50 and a gold medal, instituted. The prize is awarded every third year to the writer of the best essay on a subject connected with Military Medicine, Surgery, or Hygiene.

Examiner in Surgery, R.C.S.I. Pres. R.C.S.I. 1874-1875. He was for over 20 years Surgeon to the City of Dublin Hospital. In 1846 he started lectures on Military Hygiene in Dublin. Regius Professor of Military Surgery, R.C.S.I. 1851-1860. This chair was maintained by Government and abolished when the Army Medical School was opened in 1860. Medical Officer, Military Prison, Dublin, 1846. When placed on h.p. in 1874 Tufnell claimed that his appointment as Medical Officer to the Military Prison, Dublin, was a life appointment. Failing to get satisfaction he brought his case, by a petition of right, before the Chancery Division, and claimed compensation against the Crown that instead of continuing his office he had been placed on half-pay at the age of 56. The case, a leading one, came before Vice-Chancellor Malins, on 16 June 1876, and his judgment was (1) that a military officer is subject to the rules and regulations of the Service, and the Court has no jurisdiction to enquire into the circumstances under which he ceases to hold office. (2) That all offices in the Army are only held at the pleasure of the Crown. Law Reports, Chancery Div., vol. iii. p. 164. Manual of Military Law, 1894, p. 182.

Tufnell brought forward a new treatment for Aneurysm in his books : 1. On Treatment of Aneurysm, Dublin, 1851. 2. The Successful Treatment of Internal Aneurysm, 2 editions, London, 1864, 1875. He also devised various surgical instruments. d. 27 Nov. 1885. (D.N.B.)

Author of Manual of Practical Hygiene, 1864. This book went through four editions during his life and is still the great authority on the subject, successive editions appearing under the editorship of Professors of Hygiene at the A.M. School, but since 1896 known as Notter and Firth's Hygiene. He also made many original contributions to the Proceedings of the Royal Society, of the Royal United Service Institution, etc. He was also a Member of the General Medical Council, 1863, and of the Senate of the University of London. After his death his friends and admirers collected a large sum and with this instituted The Parkes Memorial Prizes and Medals. 1. A bronze medal and £5 in cash is given for the highest marks in Hygiene at the R.A.M. College to officers on joining the R.A.M.C. or I.M.S. 2. A gold medal and 75 guineas is awarded to the writer of an essay on a stated subject dealing with Military Hygiene. This is triennial and is open to all officers of the R.N.M.S., R.A.M.C., and I.M.S.

He received the Victoria Cross "for most conspicuous gallantry and important services on the entry of the late Major-General Havelock's relieving force into Lucknow on Sept. 25th, 1857, in having during action (when the 78th Highlanders, then in possession of the Char Bagh, captured two nine-pounders at the point of the bayonet), by great exertion and devoted exposure, attended to the large number of men wounded in the charge, whom he succeeded in getting removed on cots and on the backs of their comrades until he had collected the dooly bearers who had fled. Subsequently, on the same day, in endeavouring to reach the Residency with the wounded men Surg. Jee became besieged by an overwhelming force in the Mote-Mehal, where he remained during the whole night and following morning, voluntarily and repeatedly exposing himself to a heavy fire in proceeding to dress the wounded men who fell while serving a 24-pounder in a most exposed situation. He eventually succeeded in taking many of the wounded through a cross fire of ordnance and musketry safely into the Residency by the river bank, although repeatedly warned not to make the perilous attempt."

An Obelisk to his memory erected on the Castle Hill of Forres by public subscription, started by Sir James M'Grigor. The following is an extract from the inscription : "He was present with the same Regiment (44 F.) at the battle of the Alma, in 1854 ; and a few days afterwards, when the British were leaving the field, he volunteered to remain behind with seven hundred desperately-wounded Russians. Isolated from his countrymen, and endangered by the vicinity of large bodies of Cossacks, ill supplied with food, and exposed to the risk of pestilence, he succeeded in restoring to health about four hundred of the enemy, and embarking them for Odessa. He then died, from the effects of excessive hardship and privation." His courageous conduct was noticed in both Houses of Parliament.

"During the siege of Delhi, on 14 June 1857, while attending to the wounded at the end of a street, a band of rebels established themselves on the roofs of the houses, and began to fire down, but the gallant Surgeon drew his sword, and, gathering a few soldiers—about ten in all—rushed up the stairs, under a heavy fire, on to the flat roofs, and dislodged the scoundrels, two of his little party being killed and half a dozen wounded. During the assault on the morning of the 16th he accompanied his regiment (61 F.), was one of the first up at the breach in the magazine, and, assisted by a sergeant, spiked one of the guns with his own hands." Britain's Roll of Glory, by Parry. L.G. 5 Feb. 1861.

He was instructor to the Army Hospital Corps at Netley for many years, and in 1870 published A Manual of Instruction for Attendants on Sick and Wounded in War. This was made the official textbook for men of the Corps, and was the first of the Manuals.

Moffitt entered the service of the Emperor of China at the same time as Major C. Gordon, R.E. (aftds. General) and served with the "Ever Victorious Army" as P.M.O. until its dissolution, being present at thirty-three engagements against the Taeping rebels. He was awarded a Medal of the First Class by Imperial Decree and a special medal made by order of the Tsung-li Yamên in recognition of his attention to the Chinese wounded. Gordon recommended him for special promotion, and in his letter to H.M. Under-Secretary for War, says that in June 1863, when British Officers in the Chinese Service were placed on half-pay, "with the exception of Doctor Moffitt, the British Officers left me," and that in sixteen months 2000 wounded passed through his hands. Later, Moffitt married General Gordon's sister. [Original letters in R.A.M. Coll. Library. Harts' A.L. 1882.]

The discussion of the Army Estimates in the House of Commons on 11 Mar. 1893 explains—

1. The circumstances under which this Officer considered it incumbent on him to retire in 1890, which, as the Secretary of State for War said, was under the circumstances "an act any gentleman was bound to perform".

2. This Officer's refusal to accept reinstatement in 1891, on the footing that he should lose 35 steps towards future promotion.

3. The decision of the Secretary of State in 1893 to advise Her Majesty to reinstate him in the exact position he would have occupied had he not retired in 1890 and without the loss of a single day's pay (The Parliamentary Debates (authorised edition) vol. ix. columns 1726 to 1743).

President, Gas Industries of Great Britain. President, Association of Technical Institutions. Elected an Honorary Freeman of the Society of Apothecaries, London, in recognition of his peculiar services to the State and to the Medical Profession, June 1916.

Sir Alfred Keogh's tenure of the office of D.G. was associated with many improvements in the Army Medical Service. He was responsible for the medical organisation of the Territorial Force [see The Medical Service of the Territorial Force, an address by Sir A. Keogh, K.C.B., B.M.J. 2 Nov. 1907], the foundation of the School of Army Sanitation, the publication of the official Manual of Army Sanitation, and the instruction of combatant officers in that subject. The new building for the R.A.M. College at Millbank was opened in May 1907, and the post-graduate course of Instruction for Captains before promotion to Major was, in 1909, expanded to nine months. In addition, he has laboured successfully in improving the mutual relations between the Army Medical Service and the Medical Profession, and in inculcating in the general Medical Profession its duties to the nation in time of national emergency. [See The Relation of the Medical Profession to War, an address by Sir A. Keogh, K.C.B., B.M.J. 17 Feb. 1906.] Soon after the outbreak of the Great War in 1914 Sir Alfred Keogh took over the duties of Chief Commissioner of the British Red Cross Society in France until, in October 1914, he was recalled to England and reappointed D.G. Sir Alfred Keogh is the only Medical Officer who has received the honour of the G.C.B.

The following is the Gazette notification of Sir William Babtie's V.C. (L.G. 20 Apl. 1900): "At Colenso, on Dec. 15th, 1899, the wounded of the 14th and 66th Batteries, Royal Field Artillery, were lying in an advanced donga close in the rear of the guns without any medical officer to attend to them, and when a message was sent back asking for assistance, Major W. Babtie rode up under a heavy rifle fire, his pony being hit three times. When he arrived at the donga, where the wounded were lying in sheltered corners, he attended to them all, going from place to place exposed to the heavy rifle fire which greeted anyone who showed himself. Later on in the day Major Babtie went out with Captain Congreve to bring in Lieutenant Roberts, who was lying wounded in the veld. This also was under a heavy fire."
